London Hears Bolshevists Are Fostering Trouble In India

Habarovsk Inhabitants Stampede When Noted Raider Appears

(Reuter's Service)

Vladivostock, June 16.—The Soviet representative here, M. Vilenski, has received the following telegram from Moscow:

"Having heard that officers both present and formerly with Denekin, Kolchak, Semenoff and Wrangel, wish to join the Soviets in defending Russia against Poland, but fear punishment for former misdeeds, the undersigned proclaim that if they leave the Whites and join up with the Soviets, they will be pardoned, and all the Soviet military and civil authorities have been instructed accordingly. "(Signed) Lenin and Trotsky."

LENIN INTERVIEW

London, June 14.—Mr. Ben Turner, a member of the Labor delegation which has just returned from Russia, describing a recent interview with Lenin in Moscow, says that Lenin declared that the Russian Revolution came by force, used first against the workers and then by the workers. The Red Terror arose from the White Terror. They did not want to kill Russians but they would defend the Revolution. They were determined to maintain the dictatorship of the proletariat by force, if necessary.

With regard to trade Lenin said that Russia had flax, corn, platinum, gold and other commodities, which were ready for exchange and that she would even make concessions for the sake of securing peace externally which, he added, would bring peace internally.

BOCHKOROFF RAID

Vladivostok, June 16.—Ataman Kalmikoff's adjutant Bochkoroff and his men having suddenly appeared at Habarovsk, the town was panic stricken, many fleeing fearing reprisals.

Japanese armored cars patrolled the streets and quiet was reestablished on the assurance of the Japanese that they would not permit incidents.

Bochkaroff stated that he had no intention to fight except against the Partisans.

REPORT DISCREDITED

London, June 15.—A wireless message, received today from Moscow, reports the visit of the British Labor delegation to the Red Army, fighting the Poles in the neighborhood of Smolensk.

The receipt of this wireless message tends to discredit the stories of a new Russian revolution.

JAP DEMONSTRATION

Vladivostock, June 16.—The Japanese made a demonstration here today against the currency reform. They marched to their Consulate to register a formal protest.

WORD FROM INDIA

London, June 14.—The India Office has issued a statement, declaring that the Bolsheviki are doing their utmost to stir up trouble in India. Their agents are active throughout the East and the general feeling of unsettlement affords a congenial atmosphere for propaganda. It is well-known that there exists at Moscow a special department for the direction of Bolshevik activities in the East outside the boundaries of Russia. Whenever possible the native populations are incited against the Western Governments who are represented as the embodiments of Imperialistic and Capitalistic greed.

PLAY GREAT BRITAIN

Great Britain is held up as a particular enemy. The Indian Government is fully aware of these efforts. The machinery of the Moscow Committee is well-known and the Government of India is actively engaged in countermeasures and propaganda. It can-

Polish Forces Advance On Odessa

The advance of the Polish troops in the attack they have made on the Bolsheviki has brought them within 200 miles of Odessa and the Black Sea, which is probably the objective of the campaign they are waging against the Bolsheviks in conjunction with the Ukraine forces.

While Ukraine's independence has been recognised, the country could not stand alone against Russia, and if the campaign is successful Poland will probably establish a protectorate over the country.

Shanghai's Cotton Expert Dedicates Quarter Million Tael Plant In Chengchow

Mr. H. Y. Moh Urges Co-operation Between Capital And Labor As Method Of Industrial Success And Outlines Program Of Social Service

(China Press Correspondence)

Chengchow, Honan, June 13, 1920.—Honan's biggest cotton spinning mill, the Yu Foong Cotton Mill, was dedicated today before a large number of prominent merchants, foreign residents and officials. Mr. H. Y. Moh, general manager of the Teh Dah and Hou Seng Cotton Mills of Shanghai and manager of the new mill, welcomed the guests in a stirring address on co-operation between capital and labor and the necessity for the capitalists to perform social service work among the laborers.

After giving a detailed account of the history of the establishment and the data concerning the new enterprise, Mr. Moh said:

MANAGER SPEAKS

"The modern capitalist values highly the energy of his employes, because it is the unseen capital of industry. The employes must be trained to exert their energy economically or scientifically. It should not be wasted. The employer should always be on the alert as to the increase of employes' energy through proper boarding, sanitation, peace of mind and timely rest.

"Human efficiency can be increased through education. An employer should understand this point very thoroughly. An industry can never be considered as well established and firmly rooted, unless the laborers are more or less educated. It is the duty of the employer to educate the laborers. The more he tries to do so, the more efficient his men will be. This is the keynote to success in developing an industry.

WILL DIG WELLS

"Bearing the points in mind, this mill, in the very near future, intends to dig a certain number of artesian wells in this city to supply clear and pure water for the free use of the inhabitants, to put up a reading room equipped with selected books, daily papers and magazines, to establish Y.M.C.A. classes of particular nature adopted to this locality and to build up a vocational school for poor children, who will be trained as carpenters, masons, mechanics, etc.

"We have taken the lease of a large piece of land on which a temporary building has already been erected for Y.M.C.A. work

VOCATIONAL TEACHERS

"Two teachers for a proposed vocational school have been selected and sent to Shanghai for special training. As a matter of fact this mill will always be ready to co-operate with people here in pushing up social service work that will benefit the public.

"If it is not too much theory, I would say that this mill is not only owned by the shareholders, but also by the employes; not only jointly owned by shareholders and employes, but also by the people of this city. This mill should be considered as public property from which people can get money for their labor. Everybody here should help it and foster it, not squeeze it, kick it or make trouble with it.

PROSPERITY SURE

"China is bound to be wealthy and strong when her rich and endless resources are properly developed and managed by her worthy sons. Yet the progress of developing her industry will not be made unless the people throughout this country begin to realise the importance of developing industries to the full extent.

"May I join you in the hope that the internal trouble will soon be ended, that poor people will have enough place to work for their living and that everybody will realise the development of industry as one of the most

LEADER OF NORTH QUITS HUNAN AS PEACE MOVE

Local Disturbance Only, View Taken By Fengtien Chief

TROOPS GO HOME

Government To Dismiss Forces Controlled By Hunan Tuchun

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 16.—General Chang Tso-lin's representative in Peking has informed the government that General Chang Tso-lin is anxious for peace and has decided to withdraw all Fengtien troops from Hunan. General Chang does not regard the Hunan situation as anything more than a local disturbance, not calculated to prevent the restoration of peace.

General Wu Pei-fu left for Kaifeng yesterday, where he was entertained by General Chow Ti. He attended a reception given by merchant and student circles. A brigade of General Wu Pei-fu's troops has reached Shanteh-fu, where they are being quartered.

The government intends to send to their homes all General Chang Ching-yao's defeated and dispersed troops. The remainder will come under the command of General Wu Kuang-hsin, who will probably shortly be appointed Tuchun of Hunan.

PROTECT FOREIGNERS

Peking, June 16.—In consequence of the murder of the Rev. W. A. Reimert at Yochow by General Chang Ching-yao's troops the Government has sent a circular to all troops in the field, pointing out that it is their first duty to protect foreigners.

GOVERNMENT SATISFIED

Peking, June 16.—The Canton Government has replied to the telegram from the Cabinet demanding an explanation of the Southern advance in Hunan. The reply states that the object of the capture of Changsha was to bring about the downfall of General Chang Ching-yao. This having been successfully accomplished the Canton Government declares that it is satisfied.

WU UNPOPULAR

The importance of this communication lies in the fact that General Wu Kuang-hsin is probably just as unpopular with the South is General Chang, and in Canton's entry into political polemics, thereby resembling the provinces which are subject to the Government. There are other evidences in abundance that the old bitterness between the North and South is giving way before the desire for an arrangement in which individual interests play the chief part.

TROOPS DESERT

Ichang, June 16.—A telegram from Chengtu states:

"The fifth and sixth Szechuan divisions, under Generals Lu-chao and Shih Ching-yang, have again deserted General Hsiung Keh-wu, the Tuchun of Szechuen.

"There has been severe fighting in General Hsiung's sector, near Suining. The outcome depends on the loyalty to General Hsiung of General Liu Yu-chiu, and the fourth division at Tzeliutsing. Hochow was been recaptured from the Kweichowese who have occupied Yungchwan."

London, June 14.—The Sinn Fein and Labor organisations are embarking on a campaign in Mid-Ireland for the Dublin railway strikers.

San Francisco, June 15.—The trial of Jack Dempsey on a charge of evading the military service draft resulted in a verdict of "not guilty."

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK; ACCEPT 6 CENT INCREASE

Carpenters and masons returned to work yesterday, following the wage adjustment arranged at the meeting of their representatives with the employers on Wednesday. The six-cent increase was granted and workmen conducted their trades satisfactorily.

The situation also became easier in the rice markets. Following the arrival from Wusih, Changshu and Chinkiang of certain quantity of cereal, the price dropped four points during the last two days and the best quality is now selling at $11.60 per picul.

FLOUR IS STEADY

In compliance with the request of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce to keep the price of flour low, the Flour Merchants' Exchange yesterday decided to sell 5,000 bags daily at a price Tls. 0.10 lower than the market value.

POLICE ASK RAISE

Application has been filed by the police guards along the Shanghai-Nanking and Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo Railways with the administrations for increase of salary. The wages that the constables are getting at present are $7 per month, while the sergeants receive $12 for a month.

TO TAKE PRECAUTIONS

General Ho Fung-lin, the Acting Defense Commissioner, yesterday called a meeting of the high military officers in his jurisdiction to discuss plans for precautionary measures during the Dragon Boat Festival. He pointed out that in view of the high cost of living and the general restlessness, trouble will be possible and that his men would do well by keeping themselves on the alert.

Directors Want To Get Allotment For Their University

Request Made On Mr. Chiang Shih-chao Following Dr. Wu's Consent

The three directors of the proposed Southwestern University yesterday addressed a letter to Mr. Chiang Shih-chao, representative of Tsen Chun-hsuan at Shanghai, to hand over the money as alloted by Dr. Wu Ting-fang to the university. The signatories are Messrs. Wang Tsing-wei, Li Shih-tseng and Chen Tu-sui.

It will be remembered that, after the departure of Dr. Wu from Canton, legal proceedings were brought against him in Hongkong and Shanghai, tying up his funds in the banks at the two ports. Chiang succeeded in obtaining an injunction against him here.

Dr. Wu, however, before leaving for Japan, authorised his son, Dr. Wu Chao-chu, to inform the directors of the university, that he was prepared to allot Tls. 850,000 now deposited in the Hongkong banks for the establishment of the university.

Chiang will have to lift the injunction in Hongkong before the money can be placed at the disposal of the university directors.

British Cotton Report Is Out

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 16.—The annual report of the British Cotton Growing Association contains encouraging details of the Association's activties but emphasises the urgency of extending the cotton growing areas of the Empire, especially in view of the decline in production and increase in consumption of cotton in the United States.

The Association dealt with 30,881 bales of cotton in 1919, compared with 29,190 in 1918 and 4,887 in 1915, after which the results of the war began to be felt, but the value in 1919 was a record, namely nearly £1,500,000.

JAPAN WILL "STAND PAT" ON SHANTUNG CONTROVERSY

Issues Official Memo Blaming China For Procrastination

READY TO ACT

Will Withdraw Troops From Kiaochao Line If Guaranteed

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 16.—The following statement was issued today by the Foreign Office in Tokio in connection with the note, handed to the Chinese Government in Peking by the Japanese Minister on June 14:

"When the Treaty of Peace became effective in January, the German rights and interests in Shantung passed into the possession of Japan by virtue of its provisions. The Japanese Government, in accordance with their repeated declarations and pledges and with the desire and intention to effect the restoration of Kiaochao to China and to settle matters incidental thereto, instructed the Japanese Minister in Peking to inform the Chinese Government as follows:

KIAOCHAO RETURN

"1.—That the Japanese Government, desiring to open negotiations with the Chinese Government, relative to the restoration of Kiaochao to China and the settlement of the details incidental thereto, and hoping thus to effect a speedy solution of the entire question, expresses the hope that the Chinese Government will make the necessary preparations to negotiate.

"2.—That it is the intention of the Japanese Government to withdraw the Japanese troops from along the Shantung Railway as a matter of course upon an agreement between the two Governments with regard to dispositions at Kiaochao. In fact the Japanese Government wished to withdraw the troops as speedily as possible even before an agreement was entered into but in the absence of any competent force to assume the duty of guarding the Railway after their evacuation, they were constrained to keep those troops temporarily stationed there in order to ensure the security of communications and to safeguard the interests of Japan and China, who are co-partners in a joint enterprise. The Japanese Government therefore hope that the Chinese Government, appreciating the intentions of the Japanese Government will promptly organise a police force to replace the Japanese

Gen. Ravenshaw, Famous Warrior, Dies In So. Africa

Heart Fails While On Elephant Hunt—Had Long Service Record

G., commanding British forces in South Africa, died from heart-failure while on an elephant-hunting expedition in the Addo Bush near Port Elizabeth. His body was found lying face downwards, his rifle still gripped in his hand.

Major-General Ravenshaw had a long and distinguished record in the Army, which he entered in 1888. At one time he held the appointment of D. A. A. and Q. M. G. in the Straits Settlements. Just previous to the war he was in command of the Coast Defenses, southern command.

The editor of the paper, after five days of indignities and oppression inflicted on him by the Japanese gendarmes, was compelled to sign the following statement:

CHILDREN BORN SCIENTISTS, IS DOCTOR'S VIEW

Asiatic Society's Curator Takes Interesting View Of Youth

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Annual Meeting Of Society Is Held And Reports For Year Received

That children are born scientists, and museums should be so arranged as to allow the younger mind to comprehend the significance of their displays, was the theory advanced yesterday by Dr. Arthur Stanley, honorary curator of the Museum of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society.

"The past policy has been to keep the Museum as a natural history exhibit almost exclusively, with a definite educational purpose," he said. "The idea of a museum as a mausoleum of curiosities is not worth considering.

"Children are born scientists, keenly inquiring into the nature of their environment. Nature study cannot be commenced at too early an age. This has been kept in view in describing the specimens with a minimum of unessential detail.

"The collecting habit should be encouraged early as it teaches order, neatness and classification; which in later life are of great value in increasing general and business efficiency."

NEW OFFICERS

Aside from receiving reports the principal business of the meeting was the election of honorary officers. The following were named for the ensuing year:

President—A. Stanley, M. D.
Vice-President—Rev. F. L. Hawks Pott.
Vice-President—Samuel Couling, M. E.
Curator—A. Stanley, M. D.
Librarian—Mrs. F. Ayscough.
Treasurer—Mr. A. C. Hynes.
Editor of Journal—Rev. Evan Morgan.
Councillors—Mr. H. E. V Grosse, Rev. A. P. Parker, Mr J. P. Wilkinson, Mr. C. Kliene, F. R. G. S., Mr. R. D. Abraham and Rev. Ernest Box.
Secretary—Mr. Isaac Mason.

Mrs. Florence Ayscough, honorary librarian, made a report in which she told of the work of that department. She called special attention to the set of plates now on hand taken by order of the Imperial University of Tokio just after the Boxer trouble and said:

UNIQUE VIEWS OBTAINED

"The plates, which show different aspects of the Forbidden City, the Summer Palace, Temple of Heaven and other points of interest, were prepared in great detail and have been rearranged.

"One may now, in imagination, enter the 'Forbidden City' by the southernmost gate and proceed through the various halls, in their correct order, finally leaving the city by the northern gate—that of the 'Military Spirits.'"

Regret over the death of Mr. George Lanning was expressed in the report of the Honorary Secretary. That officer reported eight meetings in the year and listed the speakers, telling the subjects discussed and, for the Society, expressing appreciation of the members.

The Secretary was able to report that all bills, for the first

RUSS BOARD ASKS PERMIT TO EXPLORE NIKOLAIEVSK

"Nancy Moller" Advised By British Consul To Stay In Port

GULF IS MINED

Tokio Issues Statement Regarding Massacres In Northern Town

RUSSIANS REPLY

Declare That Japanese Attacked The Partisans Without Warning

Local headquarters of "Zakoopsbit," (Union of Siberian Cooperative Unions) yesterday received advices from Vladivostok to the effect that the British steamer "Nancy Moller," chartered by Russians in this city, despatched with food and supplies to the relief of Caucasian sufferers at Nikolaievsk, and prohibited by Japanese navy craft from proceeding to that port, had been advised by British authorities in the north to remain in Vladivostok for the present.

Following the reported protest of the British Consul at Vladivostok to the Japanese authorities regarding the stopping of the Nancy Moller, and the despatch of a communication on the subject to Tokio, it is believed here that the latter government has advised the British Consul to the effect that the Gulf of Tartary—the approach to Nikolaievsk—is thickly mined, and that the passage of merchant ships is not safe without escorting vessels.

Word was received yesterday by the Shanghai office of the Russta News Agency that a commission of Russians has petitioned the Japanese government for permission to go to Nikolaievsk, in company with a relief ship, and make a report on conditions there.

THE TOKIO NOTE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 16.—The following official communique was issued here today: "When it was learned that the Bolsheviki had massacred the Japanese garrison, the Consul and the Japanese residents at Nikolaievsk in March, the Japanese Government instructed the Consul and the military at Vladivostok, co-operating with the Russian authorities, to investigate and to send relief to the surviving Japanese. It was decided that the sole effective means was to send a military detachment via Alexandrovsk, which should be reinforced at the latter place by a further detachment of troops and a naval detachment.

NO SURVIVORS

"The Japanese force arrived at Nikolaievsk on June 3. Investigation was hampered by the fact that the Bolsheviki had fled after firing the town. There were no Japanese surviving and the rest of the population had disappeared. It appears that the Bolsheviki, enlisting in their ranks all the turbulent elements amongst the Russians, Chinese and Koreans in the district, attacked the garrison on March 12, 13 and 14 and annihilated the Japanese troops and many of the residents, including the Consul. One hundred and thirty other residents, the sick and wounded, children and the aged, survived and were imprisoned but all these, too, were killed on May 25 on the approach of the Japanese expedition. It is estimated that 350 civilians, about half of them women, and 306 soldiers were killed."

THE RUSS REPLY

The following statement was issued by representatives of the "Russta" news agency, following a perusal of the above memorandum from Tokio:

"The Japanese are trying to make a deep impression on the world's sentiment by repeating all the time that the Russian partisans in Nikolaievsk first made an attack on the Japanese garrison in that city; and, after overcoming the Japanese soldiers, slaughtered

Japanese civilians and fled from the city.

"If this is the case, why do the Japanese stubbornly refuse admittance to Nikolaievsk now? Why did they not permit the representative of the Zemstvo government, Mr. Kalagin, to land there and investigate the matter and then report to the Russian government as well as to the world?

"Why don't the Japanese send there Japanese correspondents of the popular press to find out and describe the situation?

"We must repeat that, until now, the only source from which news about the Nikolaievsk affair came was the Japanese military expedition.

"But we know about the Nikolaievsk battle on March 14 from a delegation that came from that city to Vladivostok via Khabarovsk in the first days of April.

"This delegation consisted of 5 men, representatives of Zemstvo and co-operative societies. Their report to the Zemstvo government is as follows:

LEAVE FORTRESS

"In February the Partisans, after long months of fighting with the Japanese on Siberian territory, came at last to the Chenarakhu fortress (about 4 miles from Nikolaievsk). After a fight with the Japanese they made them leave the fortress.

"The Japanese then settled down in the city of Nikolaievsk, took the best buildings, entrenched themselves and decided not to allow the Partisans to enter the city.

"Before leaving the fortress the Japanese burned everything they could. Two radio stations were among the enterprises destroyed by them.

"For a few weeks the Partisans waited outside the city, thinking that the Japanese would at length understand that they had to let the Russians in the Russian city.

"Twice the Partisans sent Parliamentaries, with white flags, to negotiate; but the Japanese killed all of the parliamentaries and drove the other away.

"The Partisans outnumbered the Japanese and they had heavy guns with which to destroy the buildings which the Japanese had occupied; but the Partisans did not do it because they did not want to destroy the city nor did they want to fight with the Japanese, knowing that this might bring on a war with Japan.

"So they were waiting.

"At last, on February the 29th, the chief of the Partisans, Trapitzin, received a note from the Japanese general at Khabarovsk, saying that the Japanese garrison at Nikolaievsk was ordered by him to let the Partisans into the city.

JAPANESE TAKE CHARGE

"It is important to add that, during these few weeks, the Japanese took full civil and military power in the city and, together with the Kolchaks, were shooting Russians whom they considered not reliable enough from their point of view.

From February 29th until March 14th the Russians (Partisans) and Japanese were living peacefully in one city. But the Japanese were evidently plotting a coup all the time.

"On the 14th of March the Russians held a banquet in honor of the establishment of Soviets in Nikolaievsk and Sagholien. Japanese officers were present as guests and they declared that they were friendly towards Russia and that they sympathised with the revolution. Some of them even declared that they were Bolsheviki.

"But that very night the Japanese made a sudden attack on the Partisan headquarters, killed three members of the military staff by bombs and badly wounded Trapitzin, the chief.

"This was a well prepared attack, aimed at first killing the leaders and then disarming the soldiers.

"But the Partisans put up a two-days fight and the Japanese were overcome.

"The fight was a desperate one on both sides because the Japanese knew that there would be no mercy for them and the Russians knew the same.

CIVILIANS TAKE PART

"Japanese civilians took part in this fight by firing from their shops and stores, so the Partisans had to fight them too. It was in course of battle that they were killed.

"It is very probable that the Partisans became cruel after this treacherous sudden attack upon them.

"The situation at Nikolaievsk is very much like that in Vladivostok and all after places in the Primcorskuja province, where the Japanese tried to make a coup on April 5th, during which thousands of Russians were massacred by the Japanese.

"The only difference between the situations in Nikolaievsk and the other cities is that at Nikolaievsk the Partisans put up a stubborn resistance to the attempt of the Japanese to disarm them.

"With regard to the Japanese official statements, we want the public to recollect the official statement about the 5th of April events in Vladivostok, Nikols, etc.

"They told that, after 8 hours fighting, the Japanese took Vladivostok; while it is now proved to the world that the Japanese made a sudden attack and there was absolutely no fighting on the part of the Zemstvo government."

Mystery Of Slaying Of Wealthy Manufacturer Deepens

Miss Mae Trask. Int'l

Miss Clara E. Vorrath. Int'l

The motive of the mysterious masked burglar who shot and killed Fritz Ernest Rueckert, wealthy metal manufacturer, in the latter's apartment in Hoboken is puzzling the police of New Jersey and New York.

Rueckert was slain on the eve of his departure on a business trip and had drawn $1,500 from the bank. According to the police, who have scouted the robbery theory, the evidence indicates that the assassin waited two hours to kill.

The mysterious phone message to Rueckert's apartment while detectives were searching his effects, purporting to have come from a Miss Mae Trask, saying she was engaged to the slain man, added another puzzling feature to the case until Miss Trask herself visited the authorities and denied that she sent the phone message and declared that she was just a friend of Rueckert.

Miss Clara E. Vorrath, of Hoboken, the dead man's fiancee, was at his bedside when he died. She was to have been Rueckert's bride next August.

not be said that there is no menace to India from Bolshevism. It is a fact, however, that it is by no means as great as it was. The invasions of Persia and Armenia may be partly ascribed to the failure to bring about the ruin of British rule in India, so confidently predicted.

A FIRM HAND

The Indian Government is satisfied that, if Bolshevism in India has not been killed, it has been scotched, but the position calls, not for alarmist measures, but for a continuance of a firm, wise and sympathetic rule.

FRENCH PROTEST

London, June 13.—The campaign, organised by some well-known French journals against Mr. Lloyd George in connection with the Krassin negotiations, is seriously viewed by the Observer, which remarks: "Even Lenin has not yet exercised such freedom in attacking the Premier as these newspapers. The continuance of the campaign will mean the end of the Entente."

On the other hand, the Paris correspondent of the Sunday Times declares: "The agitation against Mr. Lloyd George, which was exceedingly limited and was being worked up like a game of shuttlecock, by the opponents of the Premier on both sides of the Channel, has already collapsed and the Entente is in no way in danger. French admiration for Mr. Lloyd George is as high as ever."

TO MEET KRASSIN

London, June 15.—It is stated that the Belgian and Japanese governments have decided to join the British conversations with M. Krassin, the Soviet trade delegate.

WRANGLE WINS

Constantinople, June 15.—General Wrangel, continuing his successful advance, is at present occupying territory as large as the Crimea. He has so far captured numerous war material and great quantity of grain.

The Turkish Nationalists are shelling the Government troops near Ismio. Hitherto the British have taken no action.

Tributes Paid To Mr. Barnett By British Courts

Touching References Made By Two Judges To Death Of Former Marshal

Touching references were made yesterday to the death of Mr. E. H. Barnett, marshal of the British Supreme Court, by both Acting Judge of the Supreme Court Skinner Turner and Police Magistrate G. W. King.

Addressing a full attendance of the members of the British Bar, Mr. Turner said:

"It was, I am sure, with feelings of deep regret, that we learned of the death at Singapore of Mr. Barnett, the marshal of this Court. We all knew, when we said good-by to him, that he was a sick man, but few of us thought that his call would come so soon.

"After service in the marines, the Shanghai police and the post office at Ningpo, he joined the staff of this Court and became a very familiar figure to all here. He died in harness whilst proceeding home on his first leave since joining the court. The arrangements I was able to make for his leave and passage seemed to cheer him up and one never thought he would get no farther than Singapore.

HIS ABLE WORK

"The Judges' work is rendered far lighter by the able work of the court officials and to Mr. Barnett the judges owed much. He knew his work and was always ready to bear his full share.

"His service in the marines made him naturally anxious to help his comrades in the war and his work of collecting razors for them was an admirable scheme well carried out. After his long service to King and country, I feel that it is only right that we should pay some tribute to his memory."

The Crown Advocate, Mr. H. P. Wilkinson, stated that on behalf of the members of the bar, he wished to endorse the remarks of the Court. The deceased was a just and kind man and, in his capacity of marshal, executed his duties well.

MR. KING'S WORDS

Mr. King's remarks in the police Court were:

"The telegram received from Singapore yesterday stating that Barnett had died in the hospital there came as a great shock to me. He had been ill for a little while before leaving here and when I saw him off by the Novara on the 23rd of last month he was certainly far from well. However I had hoped that the voyage would do him good and that the stay at home would set up him again.

"During his long service in the Court, he joined in 1908, I had known him as an official very intimately. I was appointed Registrar in 1907 and from that time to this year he had worked daily with me. I would wish to place on record my appreciation of his services. Conscientious, hard working and with a thorough knowledge of his duties he was always of the greatest assistance to me. He had a sense of humor and his trite and opposite comments on men and current matters will keep his memory green with those who knew him. To his credit he stuck to the Court through the good and bad years, and how bad the latter were at times few without inside knowledge can know. It is the hardest of fates that after years of service and with leave long overdue he should have been denied the happiness of seeing once again the homeland. By his death the Crown has lost a loyal servant.

"Our deep sympathy goes out to his relatives who were looking forward to seeing him again."

Silver Declines, Owing To Offers

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 15.—The cash price of silver fell yesterday 5⅞ pence an ounce to 44¼, the lowest price since March, 1918. The decline was due to considerable offers of silver from China and the Continent and the fewness of buyers.

So Crisp

—and Delicious, too!

There are definite reasons why the New Post Toasties are vastly superior in crispness and flavour to any other corn flakes.

In the new process of baking, intense heat raises tiny air "puffs" on each flake, bringing out a decidedly new and delicious flavour—the true flavour of the corn—unknown to the corn flakes of the past.

Owing to this new process the New Toasties maintain their crispness untill eaten and do not grow soft and mushy in the bowl like other corn flakes.

The flavour is so delightfully pleasant that the New Post Toasties may be eaten and relished dry, though of course they are generally served with cream, rich milk, or fruit with a sprinkling of sugar.

Suppose you try the

READY TO ACT

"The Japanese Government are fully prepared to proceed with negotiations and to carry out their pledges but three months have passed without a reply being received. It is a source of the deepest regret to the Japanese Government that, at a time when all nations of the world are making efforts for the establishment of an enduring peace, questions of importance remain unsettled between Japan and China.

"Therefore the Japanese Government, being all the more desirous of speedily settling the matter for mutual benefit, instructed the Japanese Minister at Peking on April 26, to urge upon the Chinese Government the importance of taking the necessary steps. It was not until May 22, that the Chinese Government gave their reply to the request of the Japanese Government. The reply was in the nature of a request for delay. The Chinese Government said:

CHINA'S REPLY

"'The Chinese Government fully appreciate the intention of the Japanese Government to restore Kiaochow and to prepare for the evacuation of their troops along the Kiaochow Tsinan-fu Railway, which are incidental to the carrying out of the terms of the Treaty of Peace. China, however, has not signed the Treaty of Peace and is not now in a position to negotiate directly with Japan on the question of Tsingtao. Furthermore the people throughout China have assumed an indignantly antagonistic attitude toward the question of Kiaochow. For these reasons and also in consideration of the amity between Japan and China, the Chinese Government do not find themselves in a position to make a reply at this moment.

"'On the other hand, the state of war with Germany having ceased to exist, all Japanese military establishments within and without the leased territory of Kiaochow are unnecessary and the restoration of all pre-war conditions along the Kiaochow-Tsinanfu Railway being heartily desired by the Chinese Government and the people of China, they propose to effect a proper organisation to replace the Japanese troops in order to secure and maintain the safety of the whole line. However, as this is independent entirely of the question of the restoration of Kiaochow, the Chinese Government trust that the Japanese Government will not delay the execution of the evacuation.'

SECOND NOTE

"Upon receipt of this reply the Imperial Government of Japan addressed a note to the Chinese Government, urging reconsideration. The note was as follows:

"'In their memorandum the Chinese Government states that they did not find themselves in a position promptly to meet the request of the Japanese Government for the opening of negotiations looking to the adjustment of questions and arrangements provided for in the Treaty of Peace with Germany, because of the importance which they attached to the relations of amity between Japan and China and also because China had not signed the Treaty of Peace with Germany, and further because the people of China were indignant.

"'The Japanese Government, however, would point out that a fundamental agreement exists between Japan and China as to the disposition of the leased territory of Kiaochow. The repeated declarations of the Imperial Japanese Government leave no room for doubt of the singleness of purpose with which Japan seeks a fair and just settlement of the question at the earliest possible date. The Imperial Japanese Government, therefore, fail to understand the contention of the Chinese Government that they do not find it convenient to negotiate directly. It is a plain and positive fact that all the rights and interests, which Germany formerly possessed in Shantung, have been transferred to Japan in accordance with the Treaty of Peace. Since the Chinese Government had previously given her consent to the transfer, these rights and interests rightly come into the possession of Japan.

CANNOT BE AFFECTED

"'It follows naturally, therefore, that these rights cannot be affected in any way by the refusal of the Chinese Government to sign the Treaty of Peace. Immediately upon the coming into force of the Treaty of Peace with Germany, the Japanese Government, in accordance with past repeated declarations and pledges, proposed to the Chinese Government to open negotiations with a view to the restoration of the rights and interests in Shantung under the understanding reached in Paris, and also to negotiate over matters in connection with the restoration of the territory formerly leased to Germany. The Japanese Government had hoped that the Chinese Government would respond readily to the proposal and would not hesitate to open up the way for the Japanese Government to demonstrate by concrete actions a policy of fairness and justice towards China.

BLAMES CHINA

"'Contrary to expectations, however, the Chinese Government after a delay of several months replied that they did not find it advisable to open negotiations, giving the reasons above stated. It need hardly be necessary to point out, therefore, on whom the responsibility for delaying the settlement of the question of Shantung rests. The Imperial Japanese Government, however, always considering the amity and good neighborhood between Japan and China, hereby reiterate their declaration that they will accept a proposal for negotiation at any time considered agreeable to the Chinese Government.

"'In connection with the railway guard along the Shantung Railways, the Japanese Government refer to their note of January last, containing the statement of their intention to withdraw the Japanese troops at once, even before the conclusion of negotiations, if a Chinese police force is organised, competent to take over the responsibilities of guarding mutual interests.

OTHER MATTERS

"'Reference is made to military equipments established in and around Kiaochow. These constitute additional grounds for negotiations. It is with the desire definitely to settle with China as to the disposition of these equipments that the Japanese Government seeks to commence negotiations. If the Chinese Government will proceed to negotiate, it need hardly be emphasised that all minor questions will be solved simultaneously.'

"In conclusion, while the Japanese Government deeply regret the enforced delay in carrying out the understandings and agreements, reached at the Paris Conference, they stand unchanged in the sincere desire to promote a fair and just solution of this question with the least possible delay in pursuing a fixed policy towards China."

There will be a baseball game, beginning at 3:30 o'clock and then tennis, after which an American picnic supper will be served on the lawn.

The affair is to be held under the auspices of the American Song Service and it is anticipated that the entire "Yank" colony will turn out.

AIRMEN RECEIVE OFFICIAL WELCOME

Tokio Gives Big Fete In Honor Of Italians Who Flew From Europe

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 16.—The Tokio Municipality gave an official welcome last night to the Italian airmen, who have completed the Rome-Tokio flight. The Mayor of Tokio, Mr. Tajiri, was the host at the dinner given by the Municipality after the Italian airmen had been present at a gala performance at the Imperial Theater. The guests included the Italian Ambassador and his wife, the Embassy staff, the leading members of the Italian colony, and Japanese army and naval officers of high rank. The programs, menus and souvenirs were all written in Italian and all the speeches at the banquet were made in the same language.

SENDS THANKS

Mr. Tajiri, in the course of his speech of welcome, congratulated the intrepid airmen on their magnificent accomplishment for Japan and Italy. He said that he wished through them to thank the citizens of Rome.

The Italian Ambassador, replying, recalled that in the XVI Century a mission from Rome had been the pioneers of the route to Japan. They were two years on the way and suffered many hardships whereas the present mission, the pioneers of the new route, had only taken 3½ months.

FERRARIN REPLIES

Lieutenant Ferrarin, in his reply to the congratulations of the Municipality, stated that, though in externals he found Japan very different from Italy, at heart the peoples were very much alike and had the same ideals. Although he had only been a few days in Japan, he felt that he had lived there for years. Lieutenant Ferrarin referred feelingly to those of his comrades, who had fallen during the flight saying that they had sacrificed all to their duty to their country and to humanity. He predicted that the successful conclusion of the flight would bear great fruits. In conclusion Lieutenant Ferrarin thanked the people of Tokio for their cheers, which, he said, would echo as far as Rome.

Lawyer's Eloquence Saves His Own Life

William G. Thomson, Attacked In Philadelphia, Induces Burglar To Spare Him

Philadelphia, May 8.—William G. Thomson, a wealthy lawyer, was attacked in his apartment in the St. James Hotel by a burglar early today, and made so strong an appeal for his life that the desperado spared him. Mr. Thomson had been surprised and black-jacked into unconsciousness. When he regained his senses his assailant was covering him with a revolver.

"I knew my life was at stake, so I summoned all my faculties and had a five minutes' talk with the man," said Mr. Thomson. "He said he was determined to kill me because he knew I would call for help as soon as he left. I gave him my word I would not give the alarm for ten minutes. He evidently believed me, as he ripped off the telephone receiver, locked me in the room and disappeared."

Later there was a call to the hotel office from the fourth floor, evidently from the intruder, and a voice said:

"Man on the twelfth floor needs attention."

Employes found Mr. Thomson covered with blood from a wound on his head. He received medical attention and will recover.

time, had been cared for within the current year.

The report of the editor of the journal was particularly interesting, in that it reviewed the 62 years' career of the publication. The publication was first called "Journal of the Shanghai Literary and Scientific Body" but, before the second issue went to press, it had been affiliated with the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland and has ever since appeared under that name.

A year of continuous progress may be recorded for the Society in its main work of "investigating subjects, connected with China." Never has the membership been so large or the meetings so well attended, especially considering the absence of what is usually understood as popularity of the subjects presented.

The Library has been maintained in a state of practical efficiency—most books and periodicals connected with China can readily be found there and either read in the Library under comfortable conditions in summer and in winter or they may be taken home and browsed on at leisure.

The Museum has materially gained each year and at the present time it is a live institution which can be of assistance to students of Chinese natural history, old or young.

The Journal of the Society tends to get larger every year indicating no lack of original matter worth publishing and showing a somewhat broader interpretation of that hitherto rather narrow sinology.

Kindred societies, it may be noted with pleasure, are using our rooms for their meetings. Our society is perhaps the only one, unconnected with particular professions, which contributes actively towards the amelioration of the intellectual life of foreigners in China.

The Society has traditions in keeping with its origin so far back as 1857. Among its past active members will be found the names of Harry Parkes, Robert Hart, Thomas Hanbury, Rutherford Alcock, John Bowring, Rockhill, Chavannes, Cordier, Edkins, Giles, Parker, Kingsmill, Bushell, Muirhead, Butcher, Legge, Alabaster, Meadows, Medhurst, Bastian, Wylie, Wade, Lockhart, Swinhoe, Styan Timothy Richard, G. E. Moule and the Littles. Such names as these show that many of the best intellects who have made China the main field of their labors have sought this Society as a common source of inspiration or a place for recording their original investigations into things Chinese.

Perhaps the most remarkable development of the knowledge of China during recent years by foreigners is that of its great primordial art. In this the Society has had its due share. Prior to 1908, save for music, the Society seems to have kept aloof from art. In 1908 a very successful loan exhibition of Chinese porcelain was held under the auspices of the Society which seems to have had a vivifying effect; for it was followed by several exhibitions of pictorial art and by a series of illustrated and practical studies of the sculpture and many of the art crafts of China. As the soul of a nation is most truly expressed in its art it is good to be able to record this recent devotion to the study of the great art of China.

London, June 14.—The indignation, which has been caused by the Government's decision to sell Captain Fryatt's steamer, Brussels, was reflected in the House of Commons this afternoon. The Government had no use for her but, if sold, she might be put to some use.

BOLSHEVIKI IN BASEBALL HERE IS NEW UKASE

Regulars Challenged To Meet "Outcasts" In Game Saturday

We've been trying our best to stop this Bolshevist stuff from invading Shanghai—but here it is!

And, shades of Spaulding, it's in the baseball diamond. Whaddaya know about that?

"Tink" Tinkhamovitch started the insurrection and is being ably seconded and abetted by that well known insurgent Frank Pomeroysky.

The combination infallible has conceived the idea of a perfectly good baseball team, organised within the sacred precints of the regular club, to give the headliners a genuine tussle for their honors. The official line-up is not to be interfered with in any way but the Bolshevists are to hold their own team intact except in emergencies such as the Fourth of July or some such eventful date when outside influence may threaten.

It's a new brand of Bolshevism, however. This Shanghai Soviet has already gone on record to the effect that have a private, exclusive Bolshevism all their own and that no outsiders will be admitted.

Anyway, the situation is pregnant with possibilities. The Shanghai Club has been sobbing because it couldn't get any real opposition. The Shanghai Reds promise that there will be opposition and then some when they meet the Regulars on the diamond.

An official challenge was issued yesterday by the Insurrectionists, who are still loyal to the home organisation but seek to promote further interest in the American National Sport, for a game to start on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Leaving the Regular infield intact the Bolshevists propose this line-up: Tinkham, Porterfield, Hopkins, Merrill, Hoffman, Glauque, Held, Roberts, Pomeroy, Blanco, Pung, Wallace, Proseus, Sperry and Terry.

Another match will be played on Saturday on the Widows Monument Ground, "A" Team v. "B" Team, commencing at 1:30 p.m.

Lawn Bowls

By "Skip"

Now that "Old Sol" is beginning to show his face again there is every reason to expect that the Shanghai Championship ties will get a move on. Though there is a fairly long time allowed, it must be remembered that June is a "wet" month. A few days like we have recently experienced soon puts all program out of bounds. It is up to the players, therefore to make use of the phone and fix up at the first chance, particularly as rinks have to be reserved in advance.

Next Sunday the men from Hongkew Park will try their luck against the Lawn Bowls Club at the Race Course and I understand that they are putting out all they have, viz: Five Rinks. It ought to be an interesting afternoon.

The Recreation Club, who this season have made such a remarkable show will journey to Wayside Park and as the home team will no doubt try to get their own back a close game should be recorded. It will be noticed that "Geordie" is back again and that alone should impress the visitors with the thought that it will be no walk over.

The Lawn Bowls Club have drawn their rink competition and intend to get busy and wipe off two rounds this week. This is going some, but as one round consists of one match only there is no reason why it should not be done. Please note that the second round is down for decision tomorrow afternoon.

Here are the teams and full particulars:

Will Decide If Women Shall Occupy Pulpits

Presbyterian General Assembly Also To Judge If They Can Act As Elders

Philadelphia, May 8.—Whether women shall be allowed to fill the pulpits of Presbyterian churches or to act as elders will be one of the important questions considered at the 132nd annual meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, beginning here May 20.

At the last General Assembly a special committee was appointed to determine the views of the constituency on whether women should hold official position in the Church organisation. Dr. S. Hall Young, Chairman, is withholding all information on the report. A serious discussion is expected on the measure of the continued participation of the Church in the Interchurch World Movement.

The New Era Movement, the Interchurch World Movement, an organised union of Christianity, the relation of the Church to industry and the killing of Christians by the Turks are the most important subjects to be discussed.

The one hundredth anniversary of the Presbyterian Board of Education, which now is combined with the college board in the General Board of Education, and the fiftieth anniversary of the Women's Boards of Foreign Missions will be observed as part of the meeting.

Dr. James Gray Bolton, Chairman of the Publicity Committee, points out in connection with the New Era and Interchurch movements that from 1690 to 1919 the Presbyterian Church has grown from ten ministers, eighteen churches and 1,000 communicants to 9,918 ministers, 9,805 churches and 1,603,033 members. The communicants, who are those on the roll in good standing, represent a Presbyterian constituency of 6,000,000, including baptised children and adherents who are not members.

In 1789, the year in which appears the first record of benevolence for work outside the Presbytery or the individual church, there was $852 devoted to this purpose. In 1919 the amount contributed for benevolence was $11,485,327.

Dr. John McDowell, Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and director of the Department of Social Service in the New Era Movement, will submit an exhaustive report on the relation of the Church to industry. This is in accord with directions given at the preceding General Assembly.

Dr. McDowell has conferred with employers and employes. His effort has been to reconcile differences along Christian lines. Establishment of schools for foremen is one suggestion he makes, in the belief that foremen are frequently the cause of clashes.

Zalsman Recital

Mr. Gerald Zalsman gave his fifth song recital at the Astor House last night before an appreciative audience. He was assisted by Madames Beale, Fano, Zalsman and Cavanaugh and Messrs. Speelman, Maitland, Dexter and Dumbarton and the A. W. C. Chorus.

Special mention must be made of Mr. Zalsman's rendering of Landon Ronald's cycle of songs and of his duet with Mrs. Beale from Elijah. Mrs. Beale excells in oratorio work and she sang with much expression and dramatic effect.

Probably Mr. Zalsman has never been heard to better effect in Shanghai. Mme. Fano was in excellent voice and the audience, which was large considering the state of the weather, called her back repeatedly. All who took part are deserving of the highest praise.

The program was well chosen and handled in a most artistic manner. It was:

a.—La Vie Anterieure — Henri Duparc

b.—Phidyle ..... Henri Duparc

Mme. Zalsman

a.—Loveliest of Trees — Arthur Somervell

b.—The Lads in Their Hundreds — Arthur Somervell

c.—Hatfield Bells — Easthope Martin

Mr. Maitland

Duet from "Elijah" (Mendelssohn)

Mrs. Beale and Mr. Zalsman

a.—Two fragments from "Manon" (Massenet) Mr. Speelman

b.—Duo from "Manon" (Massenet)

Mme. Zalsman and Mr. Speelman

A Cycle of Life, Prelude, Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter (Landon Ronald)

Mr. Zalsman

b.—Night ..... Landon Ronald

c.—Big Lady Moon — Coleridge Tailor

d.—Down Vauxhall Way — Herbert Oliver

Mme. Fano

Holland Wins First Tie In Davis Cup

(Reuter's Service)

Arnhem, June 13.—The two concluding matches in the first Davis Cup tie were played here today.

Mr. Winslow (S. Africa) beat M. Diemerkool (Holland) 6-3 6-2 7-5.

M. Van Lennep beat Mr. Raymond 4-6 6-3 6-4 3-6 6-3.

Holland thus wins the first tie and reaches the final owing to Canada scratching.

The tie between America and France will be played at Eastbourne on July 8, 9 and 10.

Joan Of Arc Fete Is Most Impressive

(Reuter's Service)

Rouen, June 13.—The Joan of Arc celebrations here today were most impressive and were attended by deputations from every part of the world. Brigadier-General G. E. Pereira represented King George. A detachment of the Durham Light Infantry with its band received a hearty ovation. M. Bignon, the Chairman of the Council-General, in the course of a speech, said:

"The blood of Britain's sons has amply atoned for her treatment of Joan of Arc. Nothing remains in the minds of both peoples but the memory of their glorious brotherhood in arms and the duty of future solidarity, commanded by the dead."

Chicago Papers Discuss Harding

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, June 14.—The newspeper here have received the result of the G.O.P. nominations with the usual partisan views. The Republican organs point out that the candidate has an irreproachable character and record, both as Governor and legislator; while most of the Democratic newspapers declare him to be "a colorless candidate without any important record of achievement."

In the meantime a definite statement is being awaited from Senator Johnson, the threat of whose supporters to bolt from the convention almost precipitated a crisis.

Firemen Overcome While Fighting Blaze In Godown

Three Calls In Few Hours Keep Members Of Local Depar.m:nt Busy; Heavy Loss Is Avoided

Three alarms of fire, one false, kept Chief William Pett and his men busy from 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning until late in the afternoon and narrowly escaped causing the death of several members of the department.

The first alarm came early in the morning and was answered by a section of the Hongkew division. Half a terrace on North Honan Road Extension was afire and it took prodigious efforts to prevent a spread of the flames.

While the Hongkew firemen were on this task another alarm came in from East Hanbury and Arthur Roads. A section of the Central Division responded to the call and learned that the smoke from a brass foundry had caused a false alarm.

MEN RISK LIVES

About noon a call came in from Chekiang and Soochow Roads where a godown was afire. It was there that the firemen imperiled their lives. The official report of the blaze tells the story, graphically, as follows:

"At 12:11 p.m. a telephone message was received reporting a fire at Chekiang and Soochow Roads, a section of Central Division responded and found a two-storey godown on Soochow Road to the west of Chekiang Road well alight upstairs around the center portion.

"The firemen promptly got to work from a hydrant by the Bridge, and started up the main staircase with two lines of hose. A godown which is known as Nos. 35-6-7 Soochow Road, containing a large quantity of tea on the top floor. The firemen got some way up this staircase but could not get very far as the head was in flames and the under portion of the second flight was also on fire.

"The men going up the staircase were protected by a jet from below, so to enable them to force their way up. Unfortunately this staircase was packed on the sides with packages of tea, waste, etc., which was also on fire. The men, however, pressed on but were blocked as they got near the top as burning tea was falling on them.

"This staircase was the only means to the floor on fire, for the windows were barred and iron shuttered.

"Simultaneously with the attempt to force the staircase ladders were raised against the windows, but here again the firemen were checked as described.

BURNING TEA MENACE

"Crowbars were used to open the shutters, but the smoke was so dense as it naturally would be from burning tea, and the fact that the roof was of galvanised iron. However, the shutters were forced back, but then came another obstacle in the form of bars, also the men were held up by packages of tea, etc. It would be almost impossible to meet with more adverse conditions than the firemen had at this fire, in fact everthing was against them, even the hydrants, for there were none on this portion of Soochow Road, and apart from the one near the bridge. The next nearest was some considerable distance away right on Thibet Road. In every direction there appeared to be a check. Not to be beaten however, as the consequences would be extremely disastrous if the fire reached the ground floor below, owing to the large quantity of lard and tallow stored there.

"The men stuck to it, the windows were eventually opened and men got inside, but they could not get any distance as the smoke and heat was stifling. The wood lining of the roof was also well alight and was carrying the fire right over the whole godown, and this of course added to the difficulties.

"It was a hard and stubborn fight for two hours, men were overcome but revived. Two or three men were trapped on the staircase where they had forced their way up, by stacks of tea collapsing and blocking their retreat, but fortunately these men had sufficient hose and worked across to the back window to fresh air.

LADDERS RAISED

Escapes and extension ladders were raised to practically all the front windows and roof, and the galvanised sheets from the latter were removed as much as possible to stop the fire and to allow the smoke to get out of the building, also a large quantity of cargo, sesamun seed, lard, tea, etc., were removed by the firemen from the ground floor to save water damage.

"The godown was so packed with cargo that it was impossible to move around, and this hampered the operations of the Brigade greatly. As soon as the smoke was cleared from the building however it was possible to work more freely, and to deal with the packages of tea alight. Two divisions of the Brigade were hard at it until after 5 o'clock, by this time practically all the machines returned leaving a few men for final operations.

SITUATION SERIOUS

This godown, which is about 130 ft. 30 ft was at the time of the outbreak full of cargo of a highly combustible nature. It is practically one godown although bearing three Municipal numbers. There is a socalled fire wall, but this was of little use as it had door openings, and a roof that passed over it.

"Considering the hard task set them, the Brigade did excellent work in confining the whole of the fire damage to where it was found on their arrival, approximately two thirds of the top floor of the godown. The ground floor under this portion is naturally water damaged. A third of the godown was saved practically undamaged by the Brigade. The insurance on the whole godown is estimated at $150,000, but at the present time it is impossible to give any idea of the approximate damage."

No Change, No Ride

From The Kobe Herald

Either have your own correct change when you board a Tokio ram hereafter, or don't board it, because the conductor has orders to refuse fares tendered him if the giving of change is required and to clear his car of those plutocrats who have nothing smaller than two 10 sen notes with which to pay the 15 sen charge for riding. This extraordinary order went into force on the 2nd inst., after the Electric Bureau had confessed its own inability to get together enough 5 sen nickels to supply its conductors. Having failed, the Electric Bureau now shifts the responsibility of securing change on to the public.

The new schedule of charges, showing an increase of fifty percent went into effect on the 1st, and the first difficulty the conductors had was in arguing with passengers over the higher fare. The second difficulty came in giving change. The Electric Bureau announces that it has been combing the city for some days, but failed to secure enough to meet the demand. With great confidence, however, the Bureau officials expect the public to succeed where they failed and accordingly a new rule of "No change, no ride" has been promulgated and posted in every tram.

The new rule became the target of hostile criticism immediately. Dr. Yamasaki, a prominent lawyer of the city and a member of the House of Peers, who ran afoul of the new rule among the first, is the first to be quoted regarding it. "Nothing could be more absurd than this rule," he declares. "It is unreasonable to suppose that every person using the tramways will have a nickel in change every time he enters a car. The authorities should have foreseen this shortness of change and properly prepared for it, not take the position that people without nickels cannot ride.

Ex-Soldiers Force Women Out Of Jobs

Riots In English City Too Much For Police And Tramway Company Surrenders

London, April 29.—"Direct action" has had a signal victory in Bristol where ex-service men of the entire tramway system walked out as protest against the continued employment of women conductors.

Violent rioting took place. All the cars running were smashed and the passengers driven out, the ex-service men overpowering the police. The tramway company finally capitulated.

The men are now not only demanding the substitution of men in all pre-war jobs where women took their places, but where they had pre-war employment they are insisting on their pay being raised to equal that of men in similar work.

Berlin, April 28.—The Moscow Isvestia, a copy of which has been received here, prints the last instalment of the report of the extraordinary commission appointed for combating the counter-revolution during 1918 and 1919.

In this period the commission arrested 128,000 persons, of whom 21,032 were accused of counter-revolutionary crimes, 19,673 of offenses committed as officials, 8,367 of speculation and 9,514 for expressing anti-governmental opinions. The persons shot aggregated 9,641.

The figures refer only to the work of the Moscow and Petrograd commissions. No account is given of the arrests and executions by subordinate district commissions which existed in every province under Soviet control.

Shanghai's Cotton Expert Dedicates Quarter Million Tael Plant In Chengchow

effective means of saving our country."

The mill compound is of 98 mow and the building itself cost, in round sum, a quarter of a million taels. The capacity of the power plant and picker room, is large enough for 50,000 spindles and 1,200 looms. Only 10,000 spindles of the make of Saco Lowell shops, Boston, are running at present. Twenty thousand spindles and 200 looms are due this month from America and 20,000 more spindles are expected to arrive in Chengchow at the end of the year. Additional machinery will also come together with the shipments.

RUNNING SMOOTHLY

The management expects to see the mill running at full speed a year from now. Its engineer is Mr. V. T. Koo, a graduate of the Boston Institute of Technology. Though the plant is running without any condenser, causing a great deal of coal consumption, it is being run very smoothly.

The plant needs from 150 to 200 gallons of water per minute. In view of the scarcity of water, seven artisan wells have been drilled, ranging from 250 to 300 feet deep. The supply is quite sufficient for present purposes.

Anticipating the shortage of skilled labor in Chengchow, Mr. Moh trained 18 girl teachers and six clerks in his Shanghai mills. The scheme proved to be satisfactory and they are now able to handle the laborers quite successfully. The mill is also employing a number of skilled workers from Shanghai.

4,500 EMPLOYED

When the mill reaches its full capacity, 4,500 workers will be employed and the pay roll will amount to $600,000 per year while that of the staff will be about $150,000.

The purchase of the mill lot was completed in March, 1919. Work of Construction began in April, 1919 and on May 5, the mill began its operation.

Mr. Moh attributed the cause of the rapid completion of the mill to the two railways which meet in Chengchow, the Lung-hai and the Kin-han Railways. The Lung-hai furnished the mill with sand, amounting to 90,000 cubic meters which were taken to Chengchow from the neighboring towns and used to fill a foundation six feet thick. The transportation of this quantity of sand took 100 cars, running daily for 105 days. Both of these lines sent cars to the plant to unload heavy pieces of machinery, some of which weigh over eight tons.

How The War Started the New Reckless Fashions

Prof. Bement Explains Why the Killing Off of Marriageable Men Has Made the Competition for Husbands Sharper Than Ever Before and Has Tempted the Women of Europe to Display Allurements That Were Unnecessary Before the War

By Prof. Alon Bement,
Assistant Professor of Fine Arts, Teachers' College, Columbia University.

MANY Americans are inspecting with wonder and astonishment, tinged with some derision and occasionally, perhaps, a blush, the newest creations of Paris. I say derision advisedly, for never before has the present generation seen such extremes in brevity of skirts and in scantiness and flimsiness of bodice, even from the most eccentric and original of Parisian couturieres.

As to the blush, there are still among us citizens who are honestly shocked to see anything like immodesty associated with the sex that they have always loved, cherished and respected.

France, as a dictator of fashion, has, after nearly a century of good taste, cast aside her restraint and appeared before the world in the Summer of 1919 literally garbed in immodesty. Rumors of these changes had come to us early in the season, but the buyers and designers who went across to Paris were far from prepared for what they found. Here and there a newspaper notice had reported that certain celebrities had, as a protest against rising prices, appeared in public without stockings, but as it is one of the well-known prerogatives of celebrities to do unusual things, very little attention was paid to these notices. The first outdoor gathering at Deauville demonstrated that these reports, instead of being exaggerated, were really understated, for there it became apparent that most of the ladies were without hosiery, and more than that, their gowns were short to the knees, scant in material, and cut astonishingly low at the neck.

This fashion, rather than being a burst of eccentricity at the beginning of the season, to be moderated and improved upon later, grew more and more pronounced as the season advanced. By Summer it was being copied by the other European countries, and had been confirmed by the best modistes of Paris itself. So when the American buyers and designers returned in September, each with his quota of model gowns and designs, they were of such an extreme type that they brought down upon themselves immediate criticism from the American public, who were still unprepared for this revolutionary style.

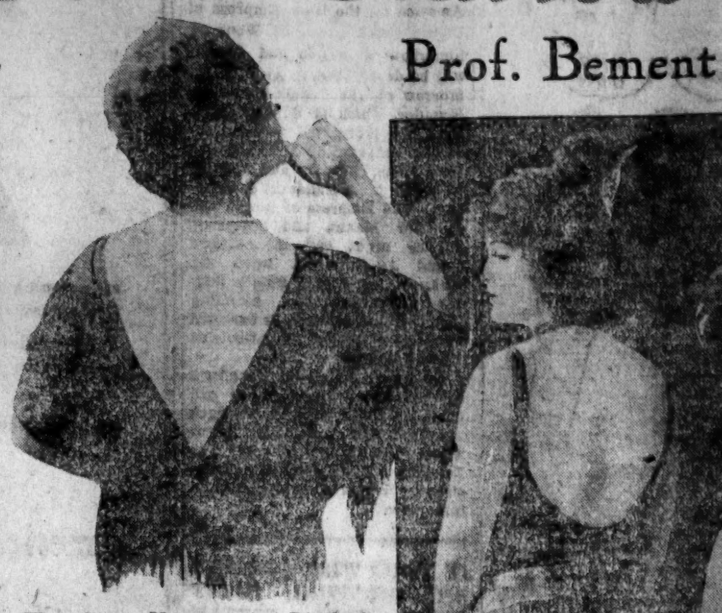
In considering this strange outbreak of fashion we must not regard it simply as a capricious, senseless, shameless desire to catch the eye. There is evidently a deep-seated impulse among the women of Europe to wear clothes that expose the figure. I find that in ordinarily sensible, well-balanced England, the girls are wearing new costumes that are fully as scant as any to be seen in Paris. In photographs of fashionable race courses and regattas in the United Kingdom I observe girls and young women of the British aristocracy displaying an unusual amount of charm. The evidence satisfies me that in every European country greatly ravaged by the war, these scanty fashions prevail. And there you have the key to the mystery. The fashions are a direct outcome of the war.

A philosophical consideration of the subject leads one inevitably to the conclusion that European women, now in an enormous excess over the men, are engaged in fierce competition to finds husbands, made scarce by war's ravages. These women are inspired by nature to replace the enormous loss of life. The racial instinct drives them on to seek men by any means in their power, at the sacrifice of ordinary delicacy of feeling. Strange to say, scarcity of clothing is caused by scarcity of men. It is noticeable that these costumes seem to aim at the brutal revelation of substantial charms rather than at the delicate semi-concealment, which at ordinary times proves so much more alluring than bold exposure.

I do not overlook the fact that some of these freakish costumes in Paris are worn by women who were not modest even in normal times. But I am also satisfied that respectable young women of good family in France and England are wearing them.

The historical evidence shows that after every devastating war seriously endangering the life of a nation the women have made extraordinary efforts to attract the surviving men. In many cases their efforts were aided by the State. In ancient Athens when long foreign wars had reduced the number of men to the minimum, the government took a hand in the matter and decreed that the tunics of all women should be slit from the hip down. We have no information as to just how effective this measure proved to be, but the record of the enactment of the law has passed down to posterity. Similar phenomena are recorded in Rome after the Punic and civil wars; in Germany after the Thirty Years' War, and at other times.

Before the late war no nation perhaps ever suffered so much loss as France during the terrific struggle that began with the great revolution and ended with the fall of Napoleon. In accordance with previous experience we find that that period was marked by the most immodest and fantastic fashions that have ever been seen.



The First Venture in Displaying the Back, Which Was Regarded as Daring, But Was Finally Accepted by Fashionable Women.

Logically the Next Step Was to Cut Away More of the Garment, Exposing the Arms and Increasing the Display of the Back.

—And—

The Present Daring Style Was the Next Obvious Step in Evolution, Bringing Us to a Complete Display of the Back and Underneath the Arms, with Almost Invisible Shoulder Straps to Hold Up the Front of the Bodice.

As the women of France recovered from the gloom of the Reign of Terror, they blossomed forth into the most frivolous and reckless costumes imaginable. It would fill volumes—and very entertaining ones—to describe the ultra-fashionable costumes of the Directoire, the Consulate and the Empire periods. I have gazed upon many quaint illustrations of these costumes, and I can at least say that they are very remarkable.

During the Napoleonic wars very gay and striking colors were favored, as well as scanty material, as if such colors were best suited to excite the war-worn sons of Mars. There is a theory that in times of war the sensibilities of men are hardened and that a corresponding coarsening of the other sex must occur, but of this I am not convinced.

One favorite costume of the Directoire period is similar to that already mentioned as having been decreed in Athens—it was slit to the thigh.

After the revolution and the Reign of Terror the women of France returned to this very Greek costume, and in cuts of the time are reproductions of a particularly noticeable one that was called by contemporary writers "The Savage." At that time the great scarcity of materials had sent the prices soaring to heights that would make even ours seem fairly endurable, and this scarcity of cloth offers another excuse for the reduction of the quantity of material used. A chronicler of the time wrote sarcastically that the women seemed not only bent on divesting themselves of every article of apparel not absolutely necessary, but had made up their minds to make the remaining garments as small and thin as possible. However that may be, they went to such lengths that the Church took the matter in hand and carried it up to Rome, and on October 16, 1800, the Pope issued a bull, which was referred to as follows in the London Times of January, 1801:

"* * * The Pope, after speaking in appropriate terms of the present scarcity of clothing, and the sensations it might excite even in the bosom of a withered monk, and, quoting the authority of St. Clement, His Holiness strictly enjoins his officers, civil and ecclesiastical, to repress by fine or corporal punishment, according to the circumstances of the case, these crying enormities. He directs, too, that punishment should be extended to such damsels as though at first sight they appear properly attired, are nevertheless decked in transparent robes, and with voluptuous attire display themselves in very seductive and tempting attitudes. Moreover, fathers, husbands, heads of families, who weakly or negligently permit their wives, daughters, servants, etc., to trespass against these rules shall not escape with immunity. Also, all tailors, haberdashers, milliners and men milliners and hair dressers, and others who contribute to these enormities of dress, shall in nowise pass unpunished. * * *"

Evidently these same styles were taken up in England at about that time, for this amusing incident is described by a writer of the day. He relates that a wager was made between two guests at a dinner party, one lady wagering that her costume, including its trinkets, would not weigh altogether more than two pounds. The wager was taken up, and when she retired and took off her costume and weighed it it was found to scale just a little over one and one-quarter pounds.

The costume is described in the original manuscript as having been a gauze chemise over pink fleshings, with gilt bands.

At one time under the Empire the ultra-fashionables discarded underwear and favored muslin costumes, which they dampened in order to make them fit closely to the figure.

Having shown that the present reckless fashions are traceable to the scarcity of men, and the desire to attract them, we must next consider whether they answer their purpose. With considerable hesitation and some modifications, I am disposed to think that they do. In the case of a woman of mature charms, an experienced man-killer, I think that such costumes would only produce a disagreeable impression on her quarry. For her the charm of artistic drapery must always be recommended. But in the case of a young woman of innocence, health, beauty and unquestionable charms, I am bound to conclude that such costumes would attract an equally thoughtless young man. Whether they would secure her the most desirable husband, may be very gravely doubted, but nature aims at the immediate continuance of the race rather than more complicated ends.

If these strange costumes are worn in obedience to an instinct or natural law, can we reasonably say that they are immodest? Here we are treading on very delicate ground. Immodesty evidently lies in intention. Lack of clothing, when it is convenient and when there is no wrong purpose, cannot reasonably be called immodest. I find an excellent definition of "immodesty" to be:

"Wanting in the reserve or restraint that delicacy requires."

If these costumes are lacking in this decent reserve, then they are clearly immodest. We have shown that their fundamental purpose is to excite sudden attraction, so that the rare man may be led suddenly into matrimony without exercising that wise discrimination, that search for the true partnership of body and mind, which he is supposed to display under normal conditions.

Then surely these costumes are lacking in reserve and restraint, and are therefore immodest. But we must modify our condemnation. If they are worn in obedience to an instinct or natural law there is certainly an excuse if not a justification for them.

The instinct to seek a suitable life partner and to do one's share in replacing lost life is certainly a creditable one in a woman. The French or English girl who is animated by this motive is a patriot. She may be sacrificing her modesty for the sake of humanity. Thus woman reveals herself in another aspect as the great enigma.

While we may believe that these costumes in France and England for the moment serve their underlying purpose, we cannot admit that their effectiveness will be of long duration. Goods too long displayed in the show windows lose their attractiveness for the customer.

Front View of This Same Gown. Note How the Effect of Nudity Is Produced by the Sharp Contrast in Color from the Waist Up, Which Is Made in a Flesh Tint.

How the Slit Skirt, Which Showed an Opening Up to the Knee, Paved the Way for the Present Extremely Short Skirts Which Are Being Worn Abroad.

Self exposure is a dangerous weapon to play with. We now understand that Phryne did not win her judges by unveiling, but, on the contrary, by her touching modesty.

We must then consider these fashions as passing phenomena following in the wake of a great catastrophe, and we should perhaps regard them with pity and sympathy rather than censorious condemnation. Carried to excess or displayed when there is no excuse for them, they defeat their own purpose and become a subject of ridicule.

And this brings us to a consideration of the peculiar fact that they have been introduced in this country. There is certainly no good reason for their existence, like that which has been demonstrated in Europe.

There is no scarcity here of men, and though there is a certain shortage of material it is hardly of so serious a nature as to precipitate a return to the first Empire gowns, and more conclusive than this is the fact that the concensus of opinion of the best known of our importers is that the Americans do not want them. They have shown it conclusively by their refusal to consider the new models at all without radical changes being made.

It is certain, too, that the French models shown in Fifth avenue have not been received with any signs of marked approval. Formerly anything from Paris was considered good enough for us. Now our experts assure us that more and more is the taste of the American modiste beginning to assert itself and leave a mark on the importations from France. Several dealers are very explicit in their statements that few French gowns are really suitable for the American trade. They admit that we still look to France for ideas and inspirations, but say that the importations often so restrict the movements that they become impossible for their American wearers, and that of late they have been increasingly bad in workmanship. Another dealer is quoted as saying that this year more than ever has America asserted its independence in the matter of modes, and if these extremes from Paris continue, "Made in America" will become as much the vogue as the "Maison Tel et Tel" has been in the past.

The examples of the new Parisian creations which I have already inspected in this country have produced a most disagreeable impression upon me. In one instance the costume consisted of heavy black material up to the waist, while above that a small portion of the bust was covered by light, white material. The obvious intention was to suggest to a casual observer that the person was undraped from the waist upward.

In another instance the corsage was hung over one shoulder by a cord, displaying an alarming area of back.

A distinguished member of the theatrical profession remarked to me:

"I am sure that American actresses will never wear such costumes."

Certainly they ought not to be worn in America, and I do not believe they will be.

In conclusion, when trying to understand why fashions are immodest or simply freakish, let us bear in mind the wise remark of the English scholar Wilfred Mark Webb, in his book, "The Heritage of Dress:"

"In the light of past history we can never feel quite safe from the next change."

SUIT CONCLUDED IN BRITISH COURT

Action Is On Claim Being Made By The Tsing Yue Dye Merchants

The hearing of the case in which the Tsing Yue Dye Merchants of Shanghai is claiming Tls. 43,425.80 damage against Frederick Large and Co. for alleged breach of contract was concluded yesterday in the British Supreme Court. Judgment was reserved.

The plaintiffs were represented by Mr. W. S. Levinson and Mr. Reader Harris appeared for the defense.

Evidence as to the alleged breach was given Wednesday by the manager of plaintiff company, and other witnesses testified as to sub-contracts made by the plaintiffs in anticipation of the goods arriving.

On the hearing being resumed yesterday morning the first witness was Mr. W. G. Hollyer of the exchange department of the Chartered Bank, who stated that the average rate of exchange of American gold dollars on T. T. to New York between 10th December and 10th March was 147.116.

Mr. Harris; "Was that the best rate obtainable during the period?"

Witness: "No. On several occasions it was possible to obtain a higher rate and at other times the rate was lower."

CASE FOR DEFENSE

After another Chinese witness had given evidence regarding one of the sub-contracts, and after Mr. Levinson had read the evidence of Mr. Bernard and Mr. Large of the defendant firm taken in chambers recently, Mr. Harris addressed the Court on behalf of the defendant firm.

He said that defendants did not deny that a contract had been made. He relied largely for his defense on the assumption that if a contract were made for the supply of certain specified goods, it followed and was naturally implied that if through no fault of the plaintiffs or defendants the goods contracted for have ceased to exist or are impossible to obtain, the contract is dissolved.

The contract in question was for the specific sale of specific goods which were found to be no available through no fault of his clients.

CITES PRECEDENTS

Mr. Harris referred at length to previous judgments in cases wherein contracts had been made and fulfilment found to be impossible, and in which it had been decided that contracts for specific goods implied that if such goods were not available through no fault of the seller or purchaser, the contract would be dissolved.

A long discussion took place between his Honor and Mr Harris as to whether the indigo paste was a definitely specific cargo; Mr. Harris continued his argument, interspersed with references to previous cases bearing on the point.

THE SUB-CONTRACTS

Referring to the five sub-contracts entered into by the plaintiffs, Mr. Harris suggested that as the only contracts recorded in their salesbook were the five concerned with the present case, and that as the entry in each of the five records to the effect that a contract had been made was in every case in ink of a lighter hue to that of the body of the entry, that these remarks regarding the contracts had been put in later than the original entries and probably in regard to the present proceedings.

Mr. Levinson addressed the Court on behalf of the plaintiff in the afternoon session and the judge announced that judgment would be reserved.

Honor Memory Of Miss Nightingale

Physicians, Nurses And Social Workers Observe Centenary Of Famous Nurse

New York, May 9.—Physicians, nurses and social workers will unite at a dinner on Wednesday night at the Hotel Biltmore to honor the memory of Florence Nightingale on the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the famous English nurse.

Among the speakers will be Major Gen. Merritt W. Ireland, Surgeon General, U. S. A.; Dr. Livingston Farrand, Chairman of the National Executive Committee of the Red Cross; Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, Medical Director of the National Mental Hygiene Committee, and Miss Anna E. Goodrich of Teachers College. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, will preside.

The following organisations have appointed committees to bring together at the demonstration the nursing and social agencies of the city into one great testimonial to the work of Florence Nightingale: The State Charities Aid Association, the Board of Managers of Bellevue Training School for Nurses, the New York City League of Nursing Education and the New York Visiting Committee.

Miss Nightingale was inspired to begin the work of the reformation of hospital conditions by a graphic despatch appearing in The London Times from the pen of W. H. Russell, its correspondent in the Crimean war, who described the suffering of the wounded in the conflict.

Russell's despatch caused a great out-pouring of money and necessaries from the British public. The Secretary of War wrote to Miss Nightingale, begging her to take charge of the funds and the medical and hospital supplies. His letter crossed one to him from Miss Nightingale volunteering to do the work.

Miss Nightingale went to the front with a band of nurses and then began the work which practically revolutionised British army hospitals. Men dying of disease amid loathsome surroundings were placed on clean hospital beds in cheerful wards. "The Angel of Mercy," as the soldiers called her, became ill, but she did not give up nursing, and kept up her work to the end of the war.

At the termination of the war a war-ship was sent to take her home. An elaborate reception was planned in her honor, but when the news of the preparations reached her she slipped on board a French ship and returned home without ceremony. Thereafter, she was the recipient of honors from rulers of nations and peoples. Great Britain gave her an official gift of $250,000, and she at once presented it to found a training school for nurses at St. Thomas's Hospital.

The work of Miss Nightingale attracted attention throughout the world, and her advice was sought on many occasions. She gave the benefit of her knowledge to this country during the civil war.

Miss Nightingale was born at Florence, Italy, in 1820. Her father was a wealthy landed proprietor. When a girl she showed a great interest in nursing and wherever she traveled she pursued her studies in this direction. As she had been presented at Court and been introduced to London society it was expected that she would take her place in the social world of London, but her interest in nursing led her to enter a nursing school of deaconesses at Kaiser-werth on the Rhine, one of the few institutions for the training of nurses in Europe. The inspiration of her work reached this country, and in 1873 the first American training school for nurses was established. There are now 1,000 such schools in this country alone.

Says German Army Is Being Reduced

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 14.—Mr. Lloyd George made the following statement in the House of Commons today:

"On May 10 the Inter-Allied Commission of Control estimated the strength of the German Army at 270,000. By June 10 the German wireless officially stated that the Army had been reduced to 200,000 and the forces in the neutral zone reduced to ten battalions, five squadrons and one battery.

"This information has not been checked by the Inter-Allied Commission but there is evidence to show that there has been a considerable reduction in the Army during the past month. The German Government has issued orders for the disarmament of unauthorised reserve formations but is still pressing for permission to retain armed constabulary."

Hankow Market

Hankow, June 9, 1920.

FINANCE AND MONEY MARKET

Some private paper came on the market early in the week but even at the drop, there was very little demand for remittance. Taels T.T. on Shanghai on the Chinese market, varied from 96.75 and closed at 96.75. Foreign banks again imported and quoted 69.8 to 96.9. Dollars Chinese market rose to 70.55 buyers and 70.75 sellers on June 5 but have since fallen and are today quoted 70.15-70.35. Native interest has fallen to 9 percent per annum. Changsha exchange nominal.

IMPORTS

We have to report a complete lack of business, no inquiry and no clearness. The market is upset by the Hunan political situation following on the slump in Japanese prices, and native banks are refusing the usual credits to dealers. The big drop in exchange has had no effect whatever on Tael values as yet, but makes new business more impossible than ever.

EXPORTS

The feature of the week has been the continued buying of beans by one privileged firm, home values generally being far too low to permit of business. There have also been considerable purchases of wood oil though home markets are weak. Everything is very quiet but stocks at home are being liquidated gradually and this should pave the way for better business later in the year.

Coal Market

In their report dated June 17, Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows:

Japan Coal.—This market is very quiet indeed partly because this is the dull season of the year but more particularly on account of the recent fall in exchange which fluctuates from day to day—down and up and then down again—to such an extent that dealers find it quite impossible to operate at all.

The Japan coal market is a little easier on account of the general depression in trade all round—what ultimate effect this will have on the market is difficult to say at present but it is bound to show itself later on in the year.

Fushun Coal.—No change.

Kaiping Coal.—A good demand still exists for this coal at current prices and the market for the better grades is in excess of supply.

Deliveries are being maintained under contract which monopolises all available tonnage and stocks are much below the average.

Hongkong Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their report dated June 11:

The sudden drop in exchange has had a firming effect on the local market and business, particularly in banks and unions, has been on a more generous scale.

Shanghai's position vis-a-vis cotton shares is now begining to come into the light of day, and quotations lately have shown a heavy decline, selling rates being the only rates in evidence.

London showed signs of strength in the beginning of the week, which have since dwindled away, and according to advices from home a good deal of selling has been on Irish account.

The chief features from last week are:

Hongkong Banks.—Are $650 buyers following on the lower exchange.

Unions.—For the same reason, are quoted $180 buyers.

Docks.—Have buyers at $153, with $154 done for June.

Shanghai Docks.—Could be placed in the North at Tls. 130.

China Sugars.—Notwithstanding the fall in exchange have weakened owing to fear of settlement liquidation, and at the close the price is $230 for cash, and $231 for June.

Dairy Farms.—Are still wanted at $23½.

Lands.—Could be obtained at $115.

Indo Chinas.—Are wanted locally at $202, but the London quotation of £40, appears to be quite nominal.

Cantons.—Have been done to a fair extent at $400.

Exchange.—The demand selling rate on London is 3s. 8¾d. and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 71½.

Moon Rocket Test Is Set For July

Prof. Goddard Will Seek Data On Conditions Above The Earth's Atmosphere

Washington, April 28.—Test of the new rocket apparatus designed by Professor Robert H. Goddard to reach altitudes far above the earth's air envelope and, as a vague possibility, even to the moon, will be made late in July at Worcester, Mass., the National Geographic Society announced today.

The immediate object of the inventor, the announcement said, was "the study of the aurora and the short wave lengths in the spectrum of the sun which are entirely absorbed by the air." Of more moderate altitudes Professor Goddard hopes to obtain valuable information concerning measurements of wind velocity, humidity, temperature and pressure, all of which enter vitally into the business of weather forecasting.

The rocket will be propelled by the explosion of successive charges. For extreme altitudes, secondary rockets, or a rocket-within-a-rocket, may be used. A special parachute will prevent destruction of the delicate instruments on the return to the earth. Accuracy in flight, Professor Goddard believes, may be obtained through the use of photosensitive sells which, through influence of rays of light, will keep the rocket on its course.

The Republican Stand

THE action of the Republican National Convention on the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations took many Shanghai Americans by surprise. They had expected that the Treaty and Covenant with the Lodge reservations tacked on, would be indorsed, and that the fight would be staged for and against the reservations, that is, the Republicans would be for the Treaty and Covenant with reservations and the Democrats for the Treaty and Covenant without reservations. They were, therefore, surprised by the news that the Republicans had, at the last, thrown away all the thunder Senator Lodge and his confreres had created. They were inclined to regard the action in the light of a volte face.

The latest mails from home, however, show that the Republicans had been tending in this direction for fully six weeks preceding the convention. Some of the Republican leaders had been in favor of casting aside the whole Versailles proposal for much longer than that, Senator Hiram Johnson, for instance, but it seemed to be the general opinion until recently that the Republicans would not be led so far.

Senator Knox, former Secretary of State and one of the most brilliant men in the Republican Party, recently took the same view, however, and in a very able speech in the Senate on May 5, supported his own resolution in favor of a separate peace with Germany and the later formation of an International Court of Justice. This speech beyond doubt had a powerful effect in swaying the Republican leaders, for the resolution was passed by both houses of Congress and was only stopped by the President's veto. The Republicans were not able to muster the two-thirds vote required to pass the resolution over that veto.

Senator Knox accused the President of attempting to coerce the Senate into approving the Treaty and the League, a treaty which he described as "almost universally discredited in all its parts." He added that "the majority of its negotiators concede this. Its economic terms are impossible; its League of Nations is an aggravated imitation of the worst features of the ill-fated and foolish Holy Alliance of a century ago. It promises little but mischief unless recast on such radical lines as will entirely obliterate its identity."

Speaking of the reservation, the Senator said:

"It has been said that reservations proposed in the Senate Americanise the league. This, of course, is not true. A more accurate statement of the effect of those reservations is that they tend to make it safer for America to enter the league by refusing to be bound in many important matters by its action. But it is not enough that the league shall be made safe for America: it must be made safe for all who enter it and safe for the world. As I see it nothing could be fraught with more danger than any nation having a specially insured relation to a league where the other members are subject to the dangers against which the immune nation attempts to secure itself.

"The only justification for a league of nations and at least the ostensible purpose of the league embodied in the Treaty of Versailles is to secure the peace of the world. The peace of the world is not assured but threatened if 31, say, out of 32 nations so curtail their liberties and sovereignty that a political council may direct them to do what as free men they will not do when the test of allegiance between league and country arises. It is by no means the question that the other nations may consent to such an arrangement. The real question is, Does such a structure rest upon solid foundations? It seems to me not, as the rights and obligations of those who are associated for a common purpose should be reciprocal. If we, by reservations, withdraw ourselves from obligations to our associates in the league, it is rather difficult to find what obligations our associates will owe to us, the limited partner.

"I have before me Mr. Balfour's views, expressed on November 11, 1919, that 'if one of us begins to make reservations I confess that I think the future of the League of Nations is dark indeed.'

"From a brilliant article by Mr. Arthur Page (one of the many intelligent Englishmen now realising that the menace of the league to English sovereignty and freedom far outweighs any material advantages accruing to Great Britain under the League of Nations) entitled "Vienna 1815: Versailles 1919," published in Blackwood's Magazine for March, I quote:

"Lord Castlereagh, on May 5, 1820, expressed the opinion that 'England must act, not by the laws other Powers may think fit to lay down . . . but from those maxims which a system of Government, strongly popular and national, has irresistibly imposed upon us.' His advice is as true today as it was a hundred years ago, and should be followed not only in Great Britain, but in each and every one of the King's Dominions. A League of Nations and a League of Empire are mutually exclusive. It is not possible to owe allegiance to the King, and also to the League of Nations, any more than a man can at the same time serve God and Mammon. The choice must be made, and now is the appointed time. 'How long halt ye between two opinions?' God grant that the British Empire will rest true to itself, and choose aright! Then, and then only, will it stand four-square to all the winds that blow; and in saving itself, it will also provide the only sure guarantee of peace, and bring light and hope into a troubled world.

"These observations apply with even more force to the great Democracy of the West.

"The Parisian peacemakers should have confined their activities to making peace and then, as soon as world conditions permitted participation therein by all peoples, initiated an international conference to formulate for submission to the nations of the world with a view to adoption by them, an arrangement providing for the codification of international law, the establishment of a court of international justice and the outlawry of war. This arrangement to be as complete, comprehensive and compelling as shall be consistent with human rights and human liberty, with the progress of civilisation, with the preservation and fostering of free institutions, and with the inherent right of every people to be secure, to enjoy peace, and to work out unhampered its own destiny subject only to like equal rights of all other peoples."

It is now clear therefore, that the Republican Convention was only following the lead of its own majority in congress in casting the League and the Treaty overboard.

The McKinley Qualities Of Warren G. Harding

(From The Literary Digest)

"Senator Harding has been compared to the late President McKinley," says the Washington Post, quoting "a prominent Ohio Republican" who happened to be in the capital. "The comparison is excellent. Harding is of the McKinley type—safe, sound, courageous, and always ready to listen to counsel."

"In the pictured physiognomies of both of these celebrated sons of Ohio there is a hint of sternness, even of granite, but, we are assured by several editors, Harding has no more of the dictator, the autocrat, in his system than had McKinley. Mr. Harding himself has come out strongly for majority rule in governmental affairs. "I had rather trust the majority of any party, even the Democratic party," he has declared, "than rely on any outstanding personality in any party, superman or otherwise."

This point was made in the course of an address "eulogising the memory of McKinley at the Memorial-day dinner in the martyred President's honor at Niles, Ohio," as the Yonkers Statesman records in the introduction of an editorial laudatory of Senator Harding's character and accomplishment. Harding would come to the Presidency as McKinley did. The Statesman points out, after having served in the legislative branch of the Government; and under a man so trained "dictation to the legislative branch of the Government by the Executive will be a thing of the past." At the same time, the candidate has no lack of firmness, as was shown when he flatly declined to accept delegates pledged to himself but instructed in favor of General Wood as a second choice. He is not going to be satisfied with "mere perfunctory or complimentary support," in his own words as quoted by the Philadelphia Record. He will run as a "favorite son" of the nation, not merely of his own State, or he will not run at all.

A bulletin entitled "Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio," has lately come from the press, and is being circulated by Robert B. Armstrong, the Senator's director of publicity. It takes up in some details the Ohio candidate's career and personality, about which, as the introduction mentions, it is proper for the public to know "when a man is put forth by those who believe in him as a candidate for high office." To quote from this account:

"Warren G. Harding, United State Senator from Ohio, was born on his grandfather's farm, where his father then resided, just outside the village of Blooming Grove, Morrow County, Ohio, November 2, 1865. He was the eldest of eight children, some of whom have achieved more than ordinary distinction; one in medicine, one as a public-school instructor, and one as a missionary in a foreign field.

"He is the son of George T. Harding, then the young village doctor, who found no night too dark and dreary and no journey too long to travel the almost impassable roads of that day to go to the relief of a suffering patient, however poor and unable to pay for the services rendered.

"The Hardings are of good old Colonial stock, coming originally from Scotland, settling first in Connecticut, removing later to the Wyoming Valley, Pa., where some of them were massacred and others fought in the Revolutionary War. The mother of Warren, Phoebe Dickerson, was descended from an old-time Holland Dutch family, the Van Kirks; so that in Warren G. Harding is found the blending of the blood of the hardy Holland Dutch and the fearless, alert, and liberty-loving Scotch. The country round about was mostly woodland when Warren was born. His grandfather owned a small tract of land and was neither better nor worse off than his neighbors. They were all engaged in cutting away the timber and transforming a primitive forest into cultivated farms. In those early days every child must contribute his share of toil in overcoming the obstacles of nature in this transforming process. As Warren grew up, he learned to fell the trees, chop wood, split rails, plant and hoe corn, and do all things incident to farm life when crops were raised between roots and stumps, and the labors of the farm were performed by hand. He early acquired the habit of industry.

"No fabled goddess hovered over the chamber when he was born. He was just a natural, healthy, robust boy, of humble but honest and pious parentage, endowed with the supremest gifts of nature—good, hard, common sense, a rugged constitution, a sunny disposition, and a heart full of the milk of human kindness.

"It was not all toil in those days, and Warren delighted in all the country and village sports. None better than he loved to haunt the old swimming-pool in Whetstone Creek, which ran near by, and none could dive deeper or swim farther. Among his schoolfellows on the village green he was a prime favorite and the leader of the gang. At sixteen he was a man both in stature and in strength; the older boys dared not bully him, and he would not permit them to impose upon the younger lads. In the contentions which inevitably arise on the playground, he early developed those traits of leadership and conciliation which have been characteristic of him ever since.

"He attended the village school until fourteen years of age, when he entered the Ohio Central College of Iberia, from which he was graduated, standing high in scholarship; and it was there, as editor of the college paper, that he first displayed a talent for journalism. Like most aspiring young men of that age, he was obliged to stop for a time now and then and earn the money with which to pursue his college course. At one time we find him cutting corn. At another, painting his neighbors' barns. Still another, driving a team and helping to grade the roadbed of the T. and O. C. Railroad, which was then building through that community. At the age of seventeen we find him teaching a district school, and "tooting a horn" in the "brass band" of the village. One of his fellow musicians, who is now at the head of a great manufacturing concern, and who has since sat with him on various boards of directors, recounts that the band once took the third prize at a tournament; and he adds that should Senator Harding be elected President of the United States it would not cause him half the pride which he felt on that occasion when we came home with the third prize for our musical proficiency.'

"At odd times he worked in the little printing-office in the village. He seemed to love the odor of printer's ink and to have a passion for everything pertaining to a newspaper office, even down to the minutest detail of the mechanical equipment. He became an expert typesetter by hand, and when the linotype was first introduced he learned to operate the machine. He is a practical pressman, job printer, and as a make-up man has few equals. The 'luck piece' he carries as a Senator of the United States is the old printer's rule he used when he was yet 'sticking type.'"

A friend recalls an incident which is offered as illustrative of Senator Harding's character. Entering the office of The Star—of which more anon—the Marion (Ohio) Star, of which the Senator is the publisher—one New Year's morning, he found the Senator making up the form. As the story goes:

"A great Senator you are," said the visitor.

"I'd be a great Senator if I didn't know anything else," he replied, extending a welcoming hand. "You see," he added, "this is a holiday, and we want to go to press as early as possible and let the boys get out and enjoy themselves; so I am just lending a helping hand."

When the task was finished they went up to the editorial sanctum, from which the rumbling of the press in the basement could be heard. Presently, as they chatted, the rumbling ceased. The inevitable, which always haunts a newspaper office in the rush hour, had happened. Springing up, he hastened to the press-room, and with trained eye located the trouble that had interfered with the operation of the press, remedied it, and the cylinders again began to move.

This same mastery of details has been a characteristic of Mr. Harding in every sphere of his active life. When he purchased his first automobile he would not rest until he had learned to manipulate it with the skill of a chauffeur, and to make such ordinary repairs as are likely to be needed when on the road.

But to return to The Star. There is the Senator's idol. The pet child of his youth and the pride of his manhood. When he was nineteen, having completed his college course, his father, Dr. Harding, seeking a wider field, removed to Marion, Ohio, the county seat of an adjoining county, where he still resides, and, despite his seventy-six years, is in active practise of his profession.

The Star was a struggling daily paper, diminutive in size, in a struggling county-seat town of four thousand inhabitants. Young Harding yearned to possess it. Though it had had such a precarious existence that it was difficult to tell whether it were an asset or a liability, his father, having faith in the boy and wishing to gratify this supreme desire of his young ambition, lent his credit in assisting him in taking it over—the consideration being only the assumption of its indebtedness. The county was then Democratic, and this paper not even the official organ of the minority party.

With the enthusiasm of youth, and the inspiration of one who has his foot upon the first rung of the ladder of his ambition, the young man bent his energies to the task of making The Star a beacon-light which should shine out of the darkness, and to lift it out of the depths of all but bankruptcy and give it a financial standing above reproach.

He lived with it by day, and oftentimes far into the night. He dreamed of it. At times he performed every function from "devil" to managing editor. Thorny was the road and sometimes the coffers were so depleted that it was necessary to request advertisers to make advance payment of bills in order to keep the enterprise afloat. But the story of how it grew and expanded, ultimately outgrowing and taking over its competitor is too long to be written here. It is the same old story of love, devotion, energy, resourcefulness, and determination winning against all odds and coming out triumphant in the end.

The Star today is a prosperous, money-making plant. It could not be purchased at any price. It has the widest circulation of any newspaper in a city of thirty thousand inhabitants in the Middle West. It is quoted more often than any other paper outside the great cities. It has not only grown with the development of the city, but has kept in advance. It has been always a "booster" and never a "knocker;" but in all of his political career not a line has ever appeared in The Star boosting his own candidacy. Always conservative, always fearless, it has fought for high ideals and won its way to a place of prestige and power; and the guiding spirit is, and was, Senator Harding. There has never been a strike or threatened strike in The Star office. His employes found him always liberal and ever generous, and they love him as a brother. After he had established his paper on a firm foundation he organised a stock company, distributing shares to each of his employes, and he and they still own it.

Mr. Harding is closely identified with many large business enterprises. Since he took over The Star, Marion has grown from a country town of four thousand inhabitants to a flourishing manufacturing city of thirty thousand, and he has been a prime factor in this industrial development. He has been a "booster" for every new industry which has located there, taking shares of stock in each to the limit of his ability. Because of his recognised business sagacity he has been made, at one time or another, a member of the Board of Directors of most of these enterprises, lending his counsel and advice, and in turn gathering much valuable information concerning the difficulties which beset the various lines of industry. He is at present a director of a bank, director of several large manufacturing plants, and is also a trustee of the Trinity Baptist Church, of which he is a member, and upon whose services he is a regular attendant when in the city. However, we are told, he has managed to get out of town often enough to see a bit of the world:

During the last score of years Senator Harding has been three times abroad, visiting most of the European countries, not on pleasure bent, but to study at close range their systems of government and the economic problems with which we have to deal—such as the tariff, the standard of wages paid to labor in the different countries, and the varied conditions surrounding their mode of life; but always he has returned with a deeper love for his own land and a firmer conviction that its form of government is the best which was ever devised by man.

After his election to the United States Senate, and before taking his seat, he visited the Hawaiian Islands to get some first hand information upon the production and distribution of sugar. He has spoken many times in almost every State of the Union, addressing now a wool-growers' association, now a farmers' institute, now a convention of steel and iron masters, and now an association of miners or of railroad employes, or a combination of laborers from some other branch of industry, thus familiarising himself with the needs of every section, and with the thoughts and hopes and aspirations of all classes and conditions of men. Having himself climbed the ladder from the lowest rung, he has given an attentive ear and careful thought to the claims and problems of men in every station of life.

Mr. Harding has twice represented the Thirteenth Senatorial District of Ohio in the State legislature, served one term as lieutenant-governor, refusing to stand for re-election; and he is now nearing the close of his first term as United States Senator from Ohio. The account continues:

"When he came into this wider sphere of action his experience in the State legislature served a good purpose, and he speedily arose to a commanding place. His fund of knowledge, and his wide experience with men and affairs gave him a comprehensive grasp of the problems with which the public service has to deal; and on his first entrance into the arena it became apparent to his fellow Senators that he was no novice, but one well qualified to render valuable service; and his utterances on the floor of the Senate have invariable commanded respectful attention.

"Senator Harding has ever the courage of his convictions, even though his stand should engender serious opposition. He early advocated preparedness while others were clamoring for peace at any price. He sponsored the bill for preparedness which had the indorsement of Colonel Roosevelt, and he was so closely associated with him during its pendency that it came to be widely rumored through the press that Colonel Roosevelt regarded him as the coming man of 1920. This close contact gave each a high regard for the sincerity and singleness of purpose of the other in arousing an unsuspecting people to a sense of impending danger in those crucial hours; and this intimacy continued until the lamented death of this most flaming and strenuous advocate of Americanism.

"The recent utterances of Senator Harding on the Peace Treaty and other questions which are now pressing for solution prove him to be a man of poise, not easily swayed by clamor or passionate appeal, and capable of exercising deliberate judgment even amid the turmoil of bitter, partisan strife.

"Two years after the unfortunate schism which resulted in turning Ohio into the Democratic column in 1912, Senator Harding was elected to the United States Senate by a majority of more than one hundred thousand, running seventy-three thousand ahead of the next highest on the ticket. In his case there was a complete cementing of the opposing factions.

"His selection as chairman of the National Convention soon after he entered the Senate, and without factional strife, bore evidence of his high standing in the party throughout the nation.

"The important work which he has done on the Committee on Foreign Relations, and other committees of which he is a member, has brought him in close touch with the great question, both foreign and domestic, with which the next Administration will have to deal."

GOLD AND SILVER BARS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir.—In the "Financial and Commercial News" section of your esteemed paper we find in the subdivision "Money and Bullion" daily quotations for Shangnai Gold Bars and Silver Bars.

We shall be very thankful to you if you can inform us as to the exact weight of a Silver Bar and that of Gold in the international standards of weights (B. U. S. ounces troy).

We could not find any exact information on this subject in corresponding literature, but we have been told on several inquiries that a silver bar weighs 100 taels and a gold bar 10 taels. If this is so, then we figure out the exact weight of silver and gold bars in the following way: We take a teal equal to 1-1/3 oz. avordupois, and knowing that 1 oz. troy B. U. S. is 1.087 oz. avordupois we find that a tael is 1.215 oz. troy, so that for the 10th June with the price of Shanghai taels 111 for silver bars this would give us (111 divided by 1.215 Shanghai taels 91.35. Is our calculation correct?

You have among your readers many highly expert in exchange matters, and prompt information from them on this subject will be greatly appreciated. Yours respectfully,

INQUISITIVE RUSSIAN.

Shanghai, June 11, 1920.

[Note: According to information obtained at the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, the average weight of a silver bar is about 1,200 oz; that of a gold bar (which is equivalent to 10 taels each, Shanghai tael weight), 11.78 ozs. The silver quotation in Shanghai currency, Tls. 111 for 100 Canton Taels. Weight of silver 999 fine; 1 Canton Tael weighs 579.85 grains. The quotation on gold is: So many Shanghai currency taels for Tls. 10 Shanghai taels weight; 978 fine. One Shanghai Tael weighs 567½ grains.]

Drab Economy.

Very few of the New Poor or that far more numerous class, the Poorer Than Ever, realise that economising is an art and not a science.

The average man who has to grapple with post-war prices on a pre-war income makes the fatal mistake of economising scientifically, says a writer in The London Daily Mail. He keeps accounts, showing every penny received and spent.

He eliminated all amusements and all such unnecessary items as library subscriptions and a weekly box of chocolates for his wife. He gives up his favorite tobacco. He spreads his salary evenly over the year. His wife is equally thorough and far-seeing in her economies.

Between them they succeed in keeping their expenditure within their income and in maintaining at any rate a shadow of their pre-war standard. But although their finances are solvent, their lives are bankrupt.

Their scientific economising results only in drab monotony. Life loses its savor and degenerates into mere existence. The scientific economisers are dull travelers along a straight and level road through scenes which never change.

It is a fatal mistake to regard economising as an exact science. It is nothing of the sort. It is an art and the secret of success is to remember that variety is the spice of life.

When pay day comes a man should treat his wife to a modest dinner in town, a theater and a box of chocolates. As a result they may have to deny themselves various things toward the end of the month. But they will have the memories of that pay day dinner and the anticipation of the next.

A husband should realise that there is far more satisfaction in one week's supply of his favorite tobacco than in a month's supply of a cheaper brand—which he does not enjoy. It is better to walk to the office than to have to forego your library subscription.

"Rank foolishness!" says dry-as-dust Science sourly. "Sound wisdom!" says Art, with a cheerful smile.

And you will find that Art is right.

Economise artistically and you will still smile and maintain that life is worth living. Life will be vivid, a thing of light and shade. It will be very different from the drab monotone of scientific economy, with never a splash of color to relieve its eternal gray.

Treat economy as a science and life loses its savor. Treat it as an art and you will smile.

"Life Is a Pudding, Love Is the Plum," sang Connie Ediss in the old days at the Gaiety. And variety is the baking powder without which the pudding is a very sad and dyspeptic affairs.

A Bad Ten Minutes For The Lawyers

(New York Times)

A certain theatrical manager, lulled, haply, by the soothing influence of a good luncheon and an equally good cigar, leaned back in his chair and chatted reminiscently of the great theatrical happening of last August—viz., the actors' strike. His words were in no degree pregnant with news, and they placed no vastly new construction upon the events of that exciting period. But they shed a light here and there, and considered merely as reminiscence they are interesting.

"Make no mistake about it," he declared, "the man who settled the strike was unequivocally Augustus Thomas. Mr. Thomas had been trying for two weeks to persuade the managers to listen to him before they agreed to do so. He sent word to them through half a dozen channels, affirmed, iterated, reaffirmed and reiterated that he was in no sense a messenger of the Equity, and that he would not ask the managers to weaken one bit in their stand.

"Most of the managers were afraid to allow Mr. Thomas to talk to them on the ground that he was too good a talker. They were half afraid that his eloquence would sweep them into some action that they would later regret. At that, Mr. Thomas would have been admitted to a managers' meeting much earlier if it had not been for the firm stand of one man—David Belasco. It was noised about at the time that Mr. Belasco was the most strongly opposed to any settlement which included Equity recognition, so I am revealing no secret when I say that he delayed the final settlement by a week or more. When it was first suggested that Mr. Thomas address the managers Mr. Belasco denounced the resolution so angrily that its sponsor was finally compelled to withdraw it, even though he felt that a majority of the managers were in favor of it.

"And so the managers' gatherings resolved themselves once more into indignation meetings. We met and talked and talked more, and did nothing. The air was filled with stories of the ungratefulness of this or that actor; a thousand stories were told, all beginning 'I knew him when—.' Finally, in all solemnity, a resolution was introduced barring all reminiscence, and it was not until then that we got down to business.

"The second introduction of the Augustus Thomas resolution met with much the same reception as the first—Mr. Belasco's stand defeated it. Then a number of managers threatened to resign from the organisation if Mr. Thomas was not received, and it looked for a time as though there would be resignations galore. Next the managers were privately consulted as to their views on the matter, and when it was found that a majority favored it the resolution was reintroduced and passed, although Mr. Belasco made himself heard, you may depend on it. But when he found that he was beaten he accepted defeat gracefully enough and even asked to be put upon the committee which was to meet th representatives of the Equity.

"It was rather remarkable, when the two sides got together, how quickly everything was settled. I shall never forget the St. Regis conference which ended the strike. What lingers chiefly in my mind is a long speech by Bainbridge Colby, who succeeded Lansing as Secretary of State, and then was counsel for the managers, who took for his text 'contractual relations' and proceeded to talk about them at great length. He discussed the sanctity of contractual relations, their part in everyday life. When he was finished Charles Shay, head of the stagehands' union, got to his feet.

"'I can't tell you an awful lot about contractual relations,' he began, 'but I've been through thirty-one strikes, and I'll tell you this: I've never yet seen one of them where the lawyers did anything but make trouble and delay a settlement. We can settle this strike in a hurry if the lawyers shut up, and I wish somebody would make a motion that they do.'

"Sam H. Harris, President of the managers' association, made the motion—and made it in just those words. Paul Turner, counsel for the Equity, asked if it was desired that the lawyers should leave the meeting. Augustus Thomas said no, not if they thought they could keep still. They kept still—and in ten minutes the strike was over."

SAYS THEY SAVED HER BABY'S LIFE.

Another Mother Gives Grateful Thanks To Baby's Own Tablets

Errors in diet and over-feeding are the most frequent causes of indigestion in infants and young children. The best treatment is the administering of Baby's Own Tablets, this gentle laxative clearing away the offending matter and sweetening the stomach. With proper attention to diet they usually effect a prompt cure. Here is one American mother's testimony:—

Mrs. John Male, of 41 Cottage Street, Pontiac, Mich., writes:—"My little baby was very sick through not being able to digest the artificial food which I was forced to give her on account of my poor health.

"I tried many remedies but all in vain, for baby kept pining away. When I was nearly driven to despair I saw Baby's Own Tablets in a drug store and started to use them. The very first I give her made her rest easy, and in the end they saved her life and made her a fine fat baby. I wish to tell all mothers who have sickly babies, and advise them to keep this valuable remedy always in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are obtainable from chemists, and at 60 cents the vial from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai. Price includes postage.

Eight Reasons Why Girls Leave Home

San Francisco, May 8.—That 25,000 of the 80,000 girls in San Francisco are without regular homes was the statement of Dr. James L. Gordon at the First Congregational Church.

Dr. Gordon set forth eight reasons for their leaving home, as follows:

1—To see the world.
2—To secure an education.
3—For financial gain.
4—Because the boys in the family receive more consideration.
5—To secure a social recognition denied them in the small town.
6.—Because of parents' lack of tact.
7.—To relieve the heart of sorrow.
8—To cover up a mistake.

Don't Forget Ground Switch

Radio amateurs should never fail to close the ground switch when leaving their apparatus. For an aerial attracts lightning and a thunderstorm may come up when the operator is absent. If it does, and the lightning is led into the house, the amateur will find all his apparatus out of business, wrecked beyond repair, to say nothing of the possibility of the house being set on fire.

Glycerined Plumes

There's a new bird on bonnets this spring. Or rather, it is an old bird that is recreated through the combined efforts of chemist and milliner and made a vogue that is attracting big sales, the milliners say. Being quite smart, the girl who seeks a new hat now will select, say, a charming turban of straw, trimmed with long sprays of ostrich. The sprays have fixed shape that are as graceful as the milliner was expert, or they are wound artistically over the entire hat shape. They look better than natural ostrich. Glycerine made them possible, and the millinery designers, giving glycerine its due, call this newest offering glycerined ostrich.

This is but one of many uses of glycerine. Where now some doughboy's girl is buying a glycerined ostrich trimmed hat the doughboy is just realising what made possible those terrible barrages that ran for from 24 up to 72 hours. He is just learning that glycerine formed a base for the explosives in many of those barrages, and perhaps he will discover some day that glycerine in the recoil checking devices kept the guns on the job. Tests proved that glycerine was of just the right resiliency to take the shock of recoil and yet assimilate it and permit the gun to return to normal position in a minimum amount of time. This use made possible the rapid firing of the big guns and lengthened the period of sustained fire, prolonging the life of the mechanism.

Strange, is it not, that the same "stuff" that helped fire the shells, enabled the guns to fire rapidly and long and has long been used to alleviate pain in chapped hands, now makes possible an effective trimming for that girl's new turban? Many persons perhaps never have thought that glycerine is a by-product of soap-making. It is produced during the early stages of boiling the soap components and it is refined highly before being marketed.

Anecdotes Of The Famous

The friendship between Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins was very close and warm. One of its fruits was the following charming letter—quoted in Mr. J. W. T Ley's book, "The Dickens Circle' that Dickens wrote to Collins during the latter's illness:

"Frank Beard has been here this evening . . . and has told me that you are not at all well and how he has given you something which he hopes and believes will bring you around. It is not to convey this insignificant piece of intelligence, or to tell you how anxious I am that you should come up with a wet sheet and a flowing sail (as we say at sea when we are not sick,) that I write. It is simply to say what follows, which I hope may save you some mental uneasiness. For I was stricken ill when I was doing Bleak House, and I shall not easily forget what I suffered under the fear of not being able to come up to time.

"Dismiss that fear (if you have it) altogether from your mind. Write me at Paris at any moment, and I will come to London straight and do your work. I am confident that, with your notes and a few words of explanation, I could take it up at any time and do it. Absurdly unnecessary to say that it would be a makeshift! But I could do it at a pinch so like you that no one should find out the difference. The trouble would be absolutely nothing to me, and the triumph of overcoming a difficulty great. Think it a Christmas number, an Idle Apprentice, a Lighthouse, a Frozen Deep. I am as ready as in any of these cases to strike in and hammer the iron out.

"You don't want me. You will be well (and thankless!) in no time. But there I am; and I hope that the knowledge may be a comfort to you. Call me, and I come."

New Strauss Opera Makes Hit In Berlin

'Woman Without A Shadow' Produced At National Opera House

BY RAYMOND SWING

Berlin, April 24.—The climax of one of Berlin's most notable musical seasons was reached with the production of Richard Strauss's opera "Die Frau Ohne Schatten" at the National Opera House.

It was performed by an excellent cast, including Mmes. Kemp, Hafegren-Dinkela and Bransell, and Messrs. Hutt and Arenster. The audience was a brilliant one and composed of leaders of Berlin's artistic life. The performance developed a personal ovation for Strauss, who responded to more than twenty curtain calls. The libretto is by Hugo von Hoffmansthan, a Vienna poet, who wrote the libretto for "Elektra" and for "Rosenkavalier."

"Die Frau Ohne Schatten" is too obtuse to be exemplary. It deals with the legend of a fairy princess, who was married to an emperor, who will be turned into a shadow because his wife is without a shadow, this shadowlessness being a symbol that she is childless. The story deals with the endeavor of the empress to purchase the shadow of a worker's wife. Through her final renunciation of this endeavor she gains salvation.

The story is illustrated by eleven scenes, two of them rising to true dramatic elevation.

Musically the opera represents a continuation of Strauss's "Elektra," although it is somewhat more amplified than the latter and is even more spectacular in orchestration. Strauss has interspersed innumerable lyric passages, equalling the best moments of "Rosenkavalier."

Technically the opera is the most difficult ever presented here and was nearly abandoned during rehearsals. This is its third production, the premiere having been in Dresden in the early autumn. It was produced in Vienna last winter.

'THE UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. OF NEW YORK

We wonder if you, who are not in the film business, understand what we, who are in the business, mean by NEW PICTURES.

Old pictures are those which have been shown in many theatres, either in America or Europe or most any part of the World, then brought here and shown to you. It is a natural consequence that these pictures, having passed through many projection machines, become worn and scratched, giving the effect of rain, and therefore not altogether pleasing to the eye, even though the pictures may be good ones.

NEW PICTURES are those which are presented to you for the first time, in exactly the same condition as those shown to your friends at home for the first time, meaning that the prints are entirely new, in first-class condition and that they have never been run through any projection machine.

Some threatre or theatres in Shanghai will show these New Universal pictures.

(To be continued tomorrow)
